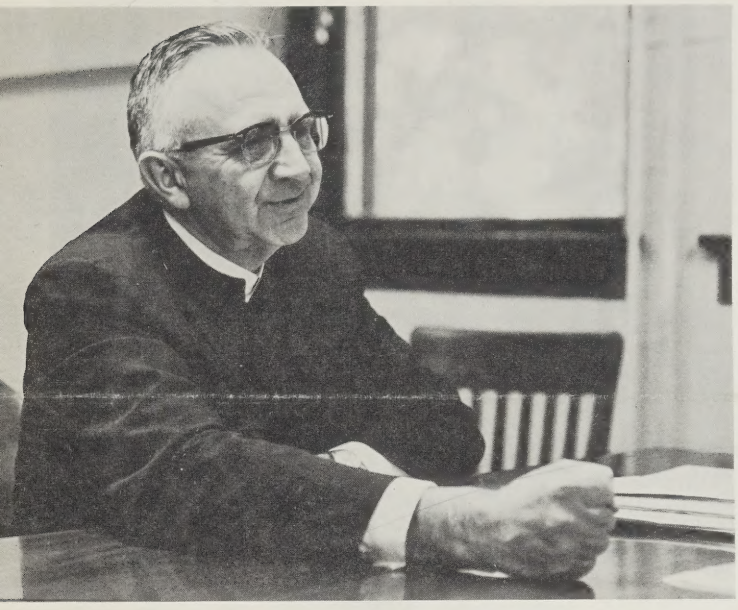
GOSHEN COLLEGE BULLETIN JANUARY 1965



Ten Guide Lines Define Goshen's Future

Our society is demanding more higher education. The small college is feeling many pressures upon it. Goshen College, during the past year as it planned for a major 75th Anniversary Development Program, re-examined its role to plan for present students and the increasing numbers of students in the next ten to twenty years. Dr. Paul E. Mininger, Goshen's president, and his staff, have set guide lines that come from the convictions of the 47 members of the Mennonite Board of Education and from the ten members of Goshen's Board of Overseers, and from their judgment of the needs in society and in higher education. Goshen also wants to follow the principle of limiting herself to that which she can do best. Pres. Mininger, in announcing Goshen's 75th Anniversary Development Program, said that there are ten major guide lines that will control Goshen's program.

YOUNG PERSONS CAN FACE LIFE'S ISSUES IN CHRISTIAN COMMUNITY OF LEARNING

In an increasingly secular society Goshen College will seek to be a Christian community of learning where young persons can face the ultimate issues of human life and destiny under professors who are competent scholars and teachers and who are also dedicated and informed Christians. We believe that it is important for the church to have colleges to serve as intellectual and spiritual centers for the renewal of its life and to make the church relevant to the needs of laymen today. We also believe that a society that gives each person a great number of choices needs to have the Christian choice presented intelligently and effectively to its future leaders, if we are to overcome the trends toward complete secularism and atheism in our public life.

In a society that will be depending more and more upon the government to provide higher education for its youth, we believe that strong independent colleges are needed which are free from dependence upon the state and are, therefore, in a position to be critical of the state. To maintain its integrity as a church college, Goshen believes it must maintain its independence from the state. From its beginning, the Mennonite Church has believed strongly in voluntarism in matters of faith as contrasted to the use of the power of the state to achieve religious and moral objectives. Because of this our church has often suffered at the hands of the state. We are, therefore, suspicious of any arrangements that might threaten the freedom of the church or its institutions.

In a society where moral standards are rapidly decaying and where men are increasingly preoccupied with their own comfort, security, and the satisfaction of their own desires, Goshen College is pledged to implementing its motto, "Culture for Service." We will continue to prepare young persons to serve others rather than teach them only for their own gain, prestige, and power.

GOSHEN TEACHES PERSONS AS HUMAN BEINGS, NOT TO BE TECHNICIANS ONLY

In a technological society that requires highly trained manpower, Goshen College believes that it is important to maintain liberal arts colleges that emphasize the teaching of men as human beings and not only the training of men as technicians or professional persons.

Goshen College believes that research is a proper function of institutions of higher education, but we are pledged to using our resources primarily for teaching. We are prepared to invest funds and manpower in research that is related to our objectives and especially as to how we can more effectively and efficiently carry out our teaching role, our major function. Teachers will be chosen with this in mind.

In a culture where the individual person is often lost in the mass, Goshen College will seek to give attention to the personal needs of each student. Although attention to individual needs is not entirely a function of size, this will mean limiting the growth of the college as well as setting up structures that will provide for the individual.

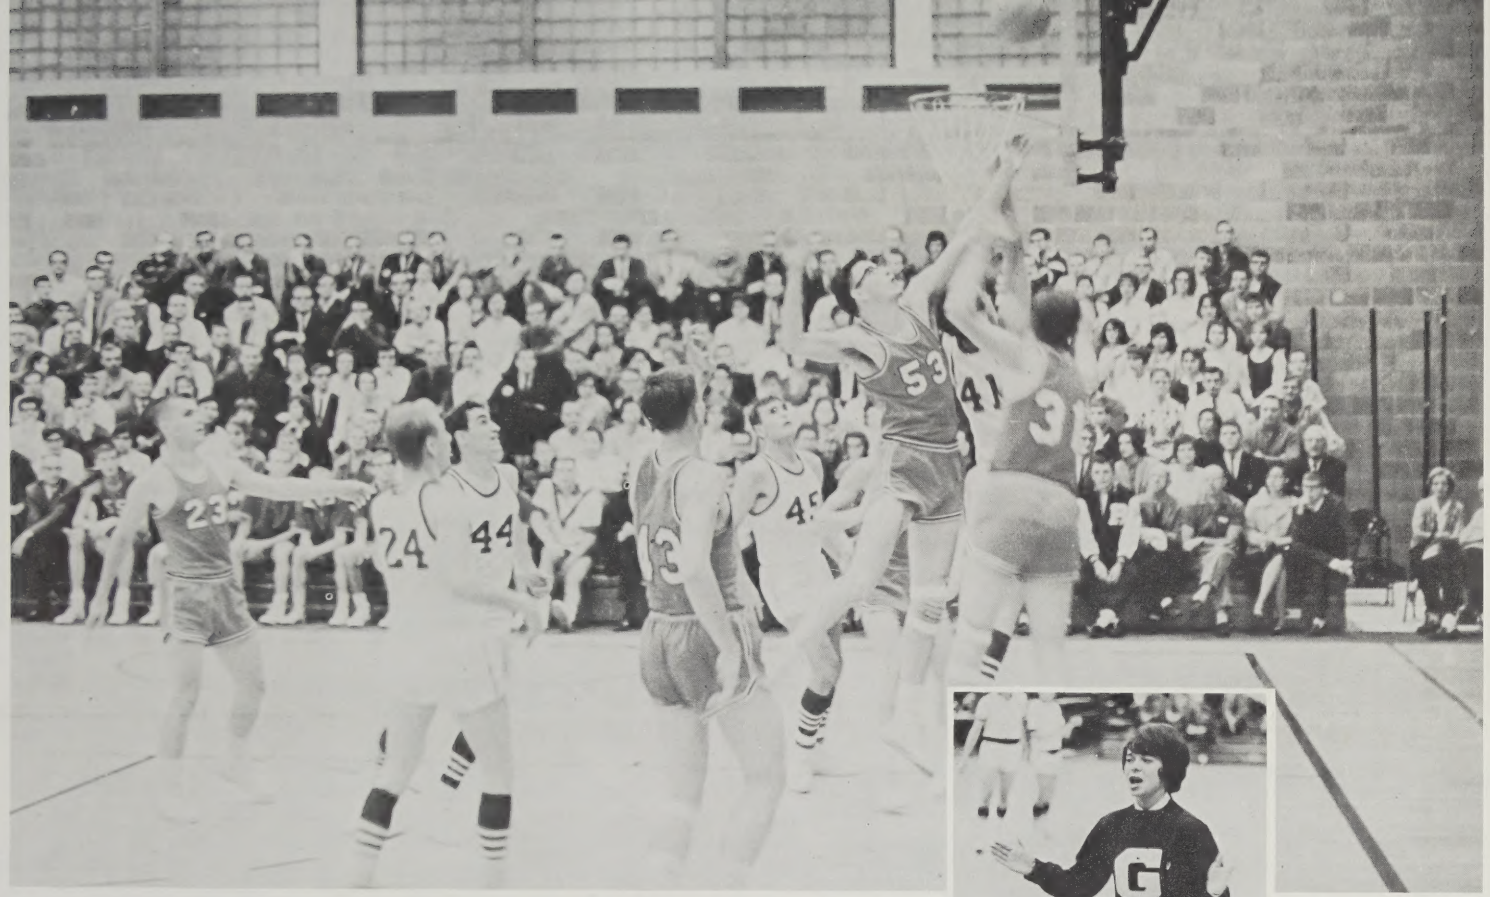
GOSHEN PLEDGED TO FIND WAYS TO HELP THOSE WHO NEED FINANCIAL AID

Private higher education today is in danger of serving the intellectually elite and the economically elite. Goshen College believes that this is a mistake. It is pledged to teach those who may not be in the upper ten per cent of their high school graduating class but who can profit from higher education and who will also become substantial citizens. We are determined to find ways to teach those young persons in our constituencies who may not be able to finance the entire cost of their education.

We believe that if students are to develop responsibility they must be willing to work and to contribute to the cost of their education. Our student aid program will, therefore, require that students be willing to work and borrow money if they are to receive financial grants from the college.

Although we believe that college teachers in the past have been seriously underpaid, we also believe that faculty members in a church college should serve because of their dedication to the cause of Christian higher education and not because of a salary that is competitive in the academic market place. We believe that there is a place for contributed service in the church college. If we are to achieve our goals there must be the element of sacrifice in the service of our teachers. Because of this our salaries will likely continue to be somewhat less than those at state and independent colleges and universities.

Goshen College will continue to serve, primarily, the young persons of the Mennonite Church, the sons and daughters of Goshen alumni, and the young persons of North Central Indiana.



Skills classes, intramural sport,
inter-school athletics, professional preparation

Goshen's Physical Education Activities Beckon Each Student to Take Part

Goshen pictures its physical education program as a pyramid of three layers. The first is a broad base of skills classes; next are the intramural athletics, and at the apex are the extramural or inter-school athletics.

Goshen's teachers devote the major part of their time and allocate the major part of their teaching budgets and the College's athletic facilities to instruction in physical education — the skills classes and the professional physical education classes for students who are pursuing a teaching major in physical education. Second in importance are intramural athletics, and third are extramural athletics.

The department of physical education offers a program that is more than ordinary in its emphasis and organization. The chairman and his staff are devoted to serving all students. They insist that the program be kept in the perspective of the philosophy and teaching aims of Goshen College. They constantly scrutinize the offerings and policies to maintain an educationally sound and up-to-date program.

For example, the teachers are presently seeking funds for the purchase of scientific equipment for testing physical fitness. Once set up, this laboratory will afford valuable research opportunities for teachers and students majoring in physical education.

STUDENTS LEARN ABOUT SATISFYING THEIR CHANGING RECREATIVE NEEDS

Starting at the foundation — where all students take part — are the required classes of physical education. Goshen considers these classes a vital part of its general education program. Through his physical education instruction, the student has the chance to gain physical competencies with which he may enrich his living and satisfy his changing recreative needs. He develops an understanding of the role of sport and recreation in society.

Goshen places physical education on an academic par with any other class. The credit hours in it count toward honors and graduation. Goshen recognizes the unity of an individual and the interrelatedness of his physical, mental, spiritual, and social development. It regards instruction in physical education as an integral part in promoting the student's total development.

Allowing for individual differences and tastes, Goshen offers 26 skill courses to men and women in required physical education. Each course is one-half semester long; in the required four semesters the student can increase his skill and appreciation in eight areas. The student selects courses for his maximum benefit and he develops skills useful to him now and in the future. He improves his physical fitness and increases his appreciation of sport and related activity.

Roman Gingerich, chairman of the department of physical education at Goshen, took time last spring before leaving for Chulalanghorn University, Bangkok, Thailand, to be interviewed by the editor for this special article. A Fulbright Grant winner, Dr. Gingerich will return to Goshen College this spring after his sabbatical.

"WITHIN GOSHEN'S WALLS" ARE ACTIVE UNITS OF COMPETITION

A second aspect of the physical education program is intramural athletics. Goshen's objective is to meet some of the recreative needs of its students by giving them the chance to engage in organized team and individual sports.

Men and women, according to classes, form units of competition. Freshmen, sophomores, juniors, and seniors compete with one another in soccer, football, basketball, baseball, softball, and field hockey as team sports and in eight individual sports, like tennis, badminton, and table tennis.

Goshen makes awards to persons in intramural athletics on the basis of the total number of points earned during the year according to its point system. The first intramural award is the purple G. Depending upon the person's rank in the point system, later awards may be a medal, plaque, jacket, blanket, or trophy for men, or a pin, cup, chevron, or blazer for women. Men may earn extra points toward an intramural award by taking part on extramural teams, but Goshen gives no awards solely for taking part in extramurals. Usually about half of the awards go to men who take part only in intramurals.

Something of the extent of the men's intramural athletics may be seen by looking at the present intramural basketball schedule. Twenty-three teams compete in three different leagues on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday afternoons each week. It will take 120 games to complete the single round robin and double elimination tourneys. Student assistants aid the intramural directors in the daily operation of the program.

INTER-SCHOOL ATHLETICS DRAW ON INTRAMURALS FOR TOP PLAYERS

Goshen refers to its inter-school athletic program as "extramural" because of its policy of requiring all persons who are members of inter-school teams to take part in intramurals.[1] This is in contrast to the practice at many colleges of making varsity players ineligible for intramurals.

Goshen's policy, along with its system of awards for intramural rather than extramural athletics, keeps the two programs complementary. An example of this is the fact that four of the eight extramural tennis players on last year's team were originally selected on the basis of their intramural performances and encouraged to try out.

Goshen's teams compete in soccer, tennis, basketball, baseball, track, and golf with church-related colleges in the tri-state area of Indiana, Michigan, and Ohio, and occasionally with other Mennonite colleges. Goshen's physical education teachers share coaching duties.

PROFESSIONAL PHYSICAL EDUCATION GRADUATES FIND JOBS EASILY

Goshen's professional program equips students to teach physical education courses and to coach athletics. Each year the demand for well qualified teachers in this area exceeds the supply when measured by the requests that come to Goshen's physical education department and the number of its graduates. Last year four of Goshen's six graduates in physical education secured jobs in church institutions — high schools, colleges, and Adriel School.

Although the Goshen graduate relies chiefly on his credentials, the publicity that goes with extramural athletics has helped graduates secure significant teaching and coaching positions. Two years ago the captain of Goshen's basketball team secured a job without presenting his credentials. The principal said, "You don't need to worry about your credentials. I know all about you." Realistically, this administrator's judgment was probably influenced more by his knowledge of the performance of other Goshen graduates than by the performance of the athlete on the basketball court.

A teacher at another Mennonite college has said he believes Goshen is in a strategic position to prepare students to teach physical education. He based his reasoning on the size of the student body, Goshen's geographic location, and the number of qualified teachers in the department. Goshen is better prepared, too, he said, to award the baccalaureate degree in physical education than other schools where the program is more top heavy with inter-school athletics.

[1] There are two exceptions. Goshen believes it takes too much of a student's time to take part in both intramural and extramural basketball. In tennis, other students asked that those with top skill and efficiency, and those with more practice, not take part in intramurals.

Goshen's Teachers of Physical Education

Roman Gingerich is chairman of Goshen's department of physical education. On leave this year, he was graduated from Goshen in 1941 with the bachelor of arts degree, from the State University of Iowa in 1946 with the master of arts, and from Indiana University in 1958 with the degree of doctor of physical education.

Ruth Gunden is a 1952 graduate of Goshen College. In 1956 she was graduated with the master of arts degree from the University of Iowa, where last year she did additional graduate study and where she is a Ph.D. candidate. In addition to her teaching, she is director of women's intramural athletics.

Harold Yoder is director of men's intramural athletics and head coach for Goshen's varsity basketball and baseball teams, in addition to his teaching duties. He was graduated from Goshen in 1950 and from Ohio State University with the master of arts in 1957. He is currently working toward the doctorate at Purdue University.

Victoria Bryan is co-ordinator of campus recreation and a teacher of women's physical education. She was graduated from Goshen in 1963 with the bachelor of arts degree. She has taken graduate study at Indiana University.

John D. Ingold coaches tennis and basketball, in addition to his teaching. He was graduated from Goshen in 1959 and from the University of Illinois in 1961 with the master of science in biology. He taught at Accra Academy, Ghana, 1961-63. He has also taught at the University of Illinois, where he is engaged in a doctoral program in physical education.

Byron Shenk was graduated from Goshen College in 1963 with the degree of bachelor of science in education. Beside teaching men's physical education, he coaches soccer and track in the extramural program. He has done graduate work at the University of Oregon.

Seniors' Weekend Set for March 26-27

High school seniors and recent graduates who are seriously interested in attending college are welcome to Goshen's Campus Open House this spring, March 26 and 27.

Seventy-three persons attended last fall's similar weekend activity and made it the best attended since Goshen began the program six years ago.

The visitors will get acquainted with future classmates, meet officials and teachers, attend lectures and laboratory sessions, and have a chance to talk about admission requirements, fees, financial aid, and their courses.

They will be guests of Goshen College during their visit. They will room in one of the residence halls and eat their meals in the Alumni Memorial Dining Room.

More information may be obtained from Admissions Counselor, Goshen College, Goshen, Indiana 46526.

Services for Students Theme of '65 Visits

Ray M. Sala, Goshen's director of church relations, says that the first 1965 visits to counselors and pastors in Goshen College's Counselor Program will be in the Goshen area on February 1.

Going with Ray this year will be Atlee Beechy, dean of students, and Russel Liechty, dean of men, who will tell about Goshen's personnel services to students.

Goshen's personnel staff offers a wide range of services to students. They begin with admissions counseling, Campus Open House, and College Preview for students before they arrive on campus as college freshmen.

On campus, they include orientation, housing, testing, and counseling—anything that helps the student adjust to college life and that helps him understand his abilities, limitations, and feelings. Providing leadership and residence hall experiences, as well as chances for spiritual, intellectual, and social growth, are a vital part in Goshen's personnel program.

New Bleachers Seat 400 More Persons

Four hundred additional persons can find seats in the Union Gymnasium bleachers, thanks to the Class of 1964, which gave $1850, and to interested individuals who gave amounts from $20 to $500.

Installed in November, the bleachers have been completely filled at each home basketball game since the Maple Leafs' first (Goshen 94, Bethel 68). The addition virtually doubles the seating capacity of 500 of the old bleachers.

Compact when closed, the new bleachers stand vertically against the wall when the gymnasium is used as an auditorium and permit greater seating capacity on the floor than do the older bleachers.

At the same time Goshen added the bleachers, new permanent glass backboards were suspended from the ceiling. They replace the movable type boards, now worn out after 13 seasons of use.

School For Ministers Set for Feb. 9-26

Paul M. Miller, Goshen College Biblical Seminary, announces the 14th Annual School for Ministers at Goshen's Seminary, February 9-26, 1965. Eighteen resource persons will take part in this year's school.

A high light of the school will be continuous study of one New Testament book and one Old Testament book. Two men together will lead the ministers in the three-week study that will make possible more comprehensive coverage at greater depth than in past schools. Ministers will also devote time to doctrinal studies and aspects of pastoral leadership.

Afternoons the first week are being planned with the Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities for an outreach institute; the second, with Oaklawn Psychiatric Center for a Mental Health Workshop; the third, with A. Don Augsburger and a study of youth materials.

The Seminary offers free tuition for the School. Board and room, as in past years, is at a nominal charge.

Goshen Merchant Leaves $2000 to GC

William Katzinger, principal partner in the Kline Department Store, Goshen, who died unexpectedly of a heart attack last December 1, left $2,000 to Goshen College. The bequest will perpetuate his deep interest in the college.

The late Mr. Katzinger was a leading retail merchant in Goshen from the time he took over the management of Kline's Department Store in 1925. He had served as secretary-treasurer of the Kline Department Store chain, with home offices in New York City, and with 19 stores, including seven in Illinois and two in Indiana. He was known in the chain as dean of Kline store managers. He also had the longest length of service of any employe of the company.

During his life he was active in the community. Close friends have described him as very charitable, having aided many individuals and organizations without any public acknowledgment.

Seminary Dean to be Installed March 22

Dr. Ross T. Bender, who began his duties last July 1, will be installed as dean of the Goshen College Biblical Seminary and the Mennonite Biblical Seminary on Monday, March 22, 1965.

In connection with the installation, there will be a consultation on March 23 and 24 on "The Role and Education of the Minister."

Dr. Bender, appointed by the Board of Overseers in January, 1964, as dean of the Goshen seminary, succeeds the late Dean Harold S. Bender, who was its dean since the founding of the seminary in 1933.

The Board of Trustees of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary, Elkhart, Indiana, appointed Dr. Bender as dean of that institution in March, 1964.

In 1962 Dr. Bender joined the faculty of the Goshen seminary as assistant professor of Christian education and assistant to the dean.

Alumni to Solicit in March

Challengers Give To Boost Record

As this Newsletter went to press, five persons had agreed to give $50 for each 1 per cent increase in the number of alumni contributing in this year's annual giving above last year's. More are expected to take part.

This year for the first time these Alumni Challengers are providing a stimulus to their more than 10,000 fellow alumni. The Challengers believe more than 17 per cent of Goshen's alumni—last year's record—will contribute to the Alumni Annual Fund. They believe that their challenge—up to $500 from each one of them—will increase the number of alumni who take part this year.

To gain each 1 per cent, 100 alumni must give this year who did not give last year. Their contributions will go to the Alumni Faculty Fund, which is a significant part of the 3½-million dollar development program at Goshen.

The limit for the Alumni Challengers was set at an increase of 10 per cent—or a maximum gift of $500 from each. Only as each alumnus responds and gives along with his fellow alumni will the Challengers give their $50 for each 1 per cent increase.

The executive committee and the Challengers hope that the $500 limit for each Challenger will be the incentive not only to get 1,000 more alumni to take part this year than last, but for an even greater number to respond.

Ronald B. Schertz '58, president of the Association, says, "Leaders in national corporations and their philanthropic foundations watch alumni rates of participation with the closest of scrutiny. They reason that if alumni do not support their alma mater, why should non-alumni support her?"

Either Visit or Mail For Each Alumnus

March 1 will be the kickoff date for the 1965 alumni self-solicitation, says Ronald B. Schertz '58, president of the Alumni Association.

In Northern Indiana, where alumni are heavily concentrated, the solicitation will begin April 1.

The executive committee of the board of directors of the Association planned the self-solicitation at its October 31 meeting last year. On the committee are Schertz, Frank Ulrich '55, vice-president; John H. Liechty '42, secretary-treasurer; Donald G. Miller, M.D., '50, past president; and Anne Krabill Hershberger '58, fifth member.

The executive committee planned that the solicitation should reach all of Goshen's 10,159 alumni in one of two ways.

From California to Virginia, from Ontario to Puerto Rico, more than 400 alumni workers will personally canvass alumni in their communities during March. They will tell their fellow alumni about Goshen's 75th anniversary development program and the part their gifts to the Alumni Faculty Fund will be in it. In these areas—where alumni are concentrated—the workers will spearhead the solicitation.

In other areas—where personal solicitation is not practical or where there is only one alumnus to a city or county—the solicitation will be carried out by mail from the office of the secretary-treasurer of the Association. In this second group of alumni are more than 2,500, including those scattered from Alaska to Argentina, from England to Japan.

The executive committee last fall chose a goal of $75,000 for this year's annual giving. The money will go to the Alumni Faculty Fund that provides for professors' retirement and sabbaticals.

Alumni Gifts at $40,000 January 31

Year-end gifts and gifts during January from alumni who have already taken part in the annual giving program this year have brought total contributions to this year's Alumni Faculty Fund to slightly over $40,000.

This amount is slightly past the halfway mark of the Alumni Association's goal of $75,000 for this year.

John H. Liechty '42, secretary-treasurer of the Association, says, "Alumni giving has been right on schedule. Continued giving at this level throughout the self-solicitation that will go on during March and April will assure the Association of its monetary goal."

Ronald B. Schertz '58, president of the Association, said, "The contributions up to this time serve as an example for all other alumni. Their support demonstrates to Goshen College their continuing interest in its program of Christian higher education."

Commenting on the goal, Liechty said, "There is no doubt that all alumni are interested in the position of Goshen College among the other institutions of higher education in North America. As they continue to support their alma mater and as Goshen continues to strengthen its programs of academic quality and of service to more young persons, its image will be an even greater source of satisfaction to them."

LINES FROM LIECHTY

There are too few guides for alumni to use in determining a fair share of support for higher education. Each one needs to work out his own equation of commitment, cash, and conscience. Some believe that Christian higher education should receive a tithe of their tithe. Support of Christian higher education at this level would seem to be quite fitting and within the reach of each one.

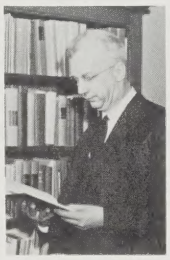
The Christian Confronts Persons

A few weeks ago a Goshen College student said to Dean Carl Kreider, "I think I am going to transfer, perhaps to Indiana University, because at Goshen all I hear is Pax, or Teachers Abroad Program, or entering the full-time Christian ministry, or something of this sort. I am getting tired of it. I expect to be a businessman and I expect to be a Christian witness in this work."

His statement bothered the dean because he had talked about TAP and Overseas Mission Associates in chapel last fall. In chapel on February 15 the dean looked at how a Christian business or professional man or woman can carry out the Great Commission as a part of his daily work. The Christian Confronts Persons, suggests that the Great Commission can be carried out in any walk of life through the confrontation that takes place between the Christian and those he meets.



One of the most amazing transformations that has taken place in the history of mankind has taken place in the past 50 years. Throughout the greater part of human history man's activity has consisted primarily of getting enough food to eat and of taking care of some very minimum needs of clothing and shelter. It took practically all his waking hours just to earn these bare necessities. As man engaged in these activities he met with few other persons: his own family and a few close neighbors in the small community in which he lived. But in carrying on this economic activity man operated primarily alone. The hunter stalked his prey alone. The farmer as he plowed his field was alone behind his team of oxen. Long hours of his day were spent in solitude.

Two hundred years or more ago a significant change took place. Manufacturing developed in factories, taking it from the home where it had been for centuries. This enlarged the circle of man's encounter with other persons in his daily work. He now confronted not only his family and close neighbors but also his fellow factory workers. Unfortunately the machinery made noises that made really significant personal encounter with others difficult. Yet I think it was an important change.

A still more significant change took place within the last 50 years, or more specifically, in the last 20. This has been the development of the service trades. To be sure, agricultural and manufacturing production is larger today than it ever has been. However, because of automation the absolute number of persons employed in the direct production of goods has gone down, and the proportion has gone down sharply. On the other hand, the number of persons in the service trades has gone up not only in absolute numbers but relatively as well. Today many more persons are serving others in merchandising, banking, insurance, government, and in the professions.

It is significant that inherent in this activity is interaction with other persons. Whereas the farmer and factory worker were engaged in producing things, the service worker is engaged primarily in interacting with other individuals. A college teacher, for example, may encounter 100 students during a week. The values of the teacher and the values of the students interact. In the case of many persons in business or in the professions, the volume of this personal encounter is often even greater than for a professor.

The quality of this personal relationship with persons whom we meet is the most important factor in determining the kind of business or professional persons we are. Further, the quality of the personal relationship with the persons we meet is far more important than the thing we buy or sell or the service we render. The Christian faith of the individual is ultimately of supreme importance in determining the quality of that relationship.

A student at Goshen College this semester doesn't have to wait until he is gainfully employed to have a chance to begin his higher vocation of Christian witnessing. He can witness right here on campus. (What a horrid phrase that is, gainful employment. I would say that a student is gainfully employed in a true economic sense while he is studying. He is building up human capital, so to speak.)

Perhaps our biggest problem is that we tend to think of Christian witnessing as some stereotyped formula. We think of asking a person, "Are you saved?" If he says "Yes," we reply with "Praise the Lord." If he says "No," or "Maybe," or "I don't know," we bring out our Testament and show him the way of salvation. Actually a great majority of us have never done that kind of witnessing and perhaps we feel just a bit guilty because we haven't. But if you study the New Testament you'll find that this "formula witnessing," as I call it, did not play a significant part in the life of Jesus. A helpful exercise in your private devotions would be to study the Gospels again and note each time when Jesus met a person. Then ask yourself, What was the quality and essential character of that encounter? I think you will see that "formula witnessing" did not play a large part. Where used, it usually was not at the beginning of His encounter but at the end.

Luke 19 gives one of Jesus' encounters with a businessman, Zacchaeus. He was a minor government official but a businessman as well. He was rich; he was a little fellow; and he was determined. When he couldn't see Jesus because of the crowd he climbed up a sycamore tree. But the poor little fellow was up in a tree in more ways than one. No one loved him; in fact, he was universally hated and despised.

Jesus' first encounter with him was not "Are you saved, Zacchaeus?" but rather the simple words, "Zacchaeus, make haste and come down, for I must stay at your house today."

Jesus didn't start with a formula. He didn't start with finding fault, as he well could have. He could have said, "You rascal, you cheat, get out of that tree." Jesus knew well that you cannot help a person by that kind of encounter. Rather, Jesus recognized Zacchaeus as a potential child of God, an individual for whom Jesus Himself was shortly to lay down His life. He said, "I must stay at your house today."

Jesus didn't care what other persons thought. They murmured, "He has gone to eat with a person who is a sinner." Jesus knew what was best and He knew what would make Zacchaeus a changed person. Zacchaeus then did what he knew he should do without even having Jesus remind him. "Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor and if I have defrauded anyone of anything I restore it fourfold." How much better it was for Zacchaeus to do this joyfully than for Jesus to insist on it. Ultimately, of course, Jesus' encounter was evangelistic, but that came at the end, not the beginning. "Today salvation has come to this house . . . for the son of man has come to seek and to save the lost."

One thing we ought to ask ourselves is, "What is going to be the quality of my personal encounter as a Christian with the persons I meet every day right here on campus?" As we ask this question we will recognize that life consists of a series of choices. The most obvious witnessing that we do is the way in which we make choices each day. Certainly one of the most significant is how shall we spend our time, for it expresses what we think are the relatively more important values. The question of whether we cheat on tests is a form of witnessing. Whether we plagiarize in writing a term paper or whether we express it less elegantly in our own words is also witnessing.

Sometimes, of course, we need to use words. When we have encounters with others by means of words rather than by deeds let us remember clearly the example of Jesus. He saw first of all the person's basic need. Zacchaeus himself did not recognize this need. It was not the need that other persons would have seen for Zacchaeus. Jesus saw the deep seated human need of this person and He started by choosing words that met that basic need. "Zacchaeus, I must stay at your house today."

WHAT HAPPENS IN SERVICE? FIVE GOSHEN STUDENTS ANSWER

Sheri Copenhaver, Goshen, Ind., a sophomore majoring in English and planning a career in secondary education, spent ten weeks at Farmington, N. Mex., two years ago as a housemother to 15 Navaho children, ages 2 to 13.

Miss Copenhaver, a Methodist, says, "Serving at Farmington gave me an insight into another culture. I also learned self-discipline—I was up at 5:30 every morning to wash, iron, clean, and bake."

John Hackman, Souderton, Pa., a senior majoring in sociology, was an assistant laboratory technician in animal care at Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons, 1959-61. He worked in neurological research with 100 cats and six monkeys. John will be graduated from Goshen in June; he may enter seminary or a career in social work.

John says, "My two years in New York City liberated my mind. I sprouted emotionally, psychologically, and intellectually. I developed a thirst for knowledge. One of the important things I learned was the value of personal relationships. For example, there is a need in a city church for each person to know the problems of another and be the church to each other since individual Christians, who are in the minority, by necessity fend off the drive for anonymity which is more intense in the city."

Charlotte Weldy, Wakarusa, Ind., a junior majoring in elementary education, last summer took part in the European educational tour and Mennonite Voluntary Service work camp. During August she, with 15 international students from six countries, helped the members at Selon-court, France, build their church.

Miss Weldy says, "The travel and meeting persons from other nations was a tremendous experience for a prospective teacher. My main objective was to let persons in other countries know I was interested in them."

Carl Newcomer, Seville, Ohio, a senior planning a career in social work, used two years between his freshman and sophomore years to be recreation attendant to boys and men, some of whom were psychotics and schizophrenics, at the psychopathic hospital at Iowa City, Iowa.

Carl had had experience farming and as a bank teller. But back at Goshen he chose to prepare for social work because "I figured I could contribute more as a social worker than in business. Voluntary service helped me define my life vocation."

Norman Leichty, Wayland, Iowa, a senior majoring in history, was a Pax man in Austria, 1959-61. He was part of a unit of 18 young men who, over six years, rebuilt a 600-pupil elementary-junior high school that had been burned during the Second World War. Norman plans on graduate preparation and then, perhaps, teaching high school.

"From Pax," says Norman, "I developed a broader interest in persons and their needs. I got accustomed to new patterns and ways of doing things. There was a value in taking Pax before college. I'm older and I am more serious with my studies. I can relate my studies to what I think will be coming in the years ahead."

the American Mennonites who started this international program 14 years ago. Over 500 young men have served in Pax to fulfill their alternative military service requirements. They have worked in a wide variety of capacities on mechanical and agricultural projects, as teachers, tutors, secretaries, etc. The Pax recruit receives only $15 monthly allowance, plus transportation and maintenance.

"The total Mennonite Central Committee program now has 600 Pax workers, half of them serving abroad in Europe, Africa, Latin America, and Asia. Nearly 200 are serving in four mental hospitals in the United States. About 75 serve in four underprivileged areas on work similar to that projected for a domestic Peace Corps.

"The MCC is supported by Mennonites and the Brethren in Christ churches in Canada and the United States, a constituency of fewer than 230,000 members. . . . The MCC leaders, along with the Quakers associated with the American Friends Service Committee, the Baptists, Methodists, and others experienced in foreign missions have contributed much to the Peace Corps."

There is no doubt that Goshen College would have a different atmosphere about it if it were not for the numbers of teachers and students who have taken part in Pax or some other service assignment.

Fifty-one per cent of the faculty have served overseas, bringing a distinct international service dimension to the classrooms. The teachers have distributed food and clothing to war refugees, served as educators in young, emerging countries, and, for another example, have analyzed soils and plant growth in areas of the world that have low food productivity.

Led by Dr. Paul Mininger, Goshen's president, who has traveled extensively and observed conditions in Western Europe, the Middle East, and in Africa, the teachers have gone to almost every habitable area on earth, including academic excursions behind the Iron Curtain.

Dean Carl Kreider returned last August from a year of teaching at Haile Selassie I University at Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. Earlier he had been dean of the college at International Christian University, Tokyo.

Dr. Karl Massanari, chairman of the division of teacher education, visited Poland in April, 1963. He observed conditions there as one of seven educators asked by the U. S. State Department to make the trip.

Dr. Atlee Beechy, dean of students, was a Fulbright lecturer at the University of Allahabad, India, 1960-61. Dr. Roy H. Umble, of the department of speech, taught at Pierce College, Athens, Greece, 1956-58. Dr. Samuel A. Yoder, of the department of English, has taught at three colleges overseas—Anatolia College in Greece, Taiwan University in Formosa, and the University of Hue in Viet Nam. Prof. Orpah B. Mosemann, director of the school of nursing, returned last fall from a round-the-world trip during which she observed nursing programs and hospitals in Asia, Africa, and Europe.

This year Dr. Roman Gingerich, of the department of physical education, is a Fulbright lecturer at Chulalanghorn University, Bangkok, Thailand. Dr. Henry D. Weaver, Jr., of Goshen's department of chemistry, is advisor in chemistry at San Marcos University, Lima, Peru, this year under a grant by the Ford Foundation and four government agencies.

Other teachers have served on medical teams to distressed areas. Miss Anna Mae Eby, of the School of Nursing, served in Haiti when parts of the island were ravaged by Hurricane Flora in 1963. Dr. H. Clair Amstutz, college physician, has served at Filadelfia Hospital in the Chaco, Paraguay.

The list, though far from complete, is typical of the services given by Goshen teachers abroad.

Students too share the idea. The majority take a part in local activities of the Student Christian Association. Four evenings a week students help children from broken homes learn crafts or study skills. Others tutor school-age boys at Bashor Children's Home. On Sundays some hold short worship services or sing old-time favorites for shut-ins and the aging, and at rescue missions.

The story is similar for those who travel some 100 miles or so from campus. Over weekends carloads of students go to Southern Indiana or to Chicago and help struggling congregations clean up and paint their churches, and help them organize and run programs for their children and young people. At Christmas or at Eastertime, students have gone to St. Louis, Chicago, Atlanta, and Cleveland to get better acquainted with the "inner city."

Students serve during the summer as camp counselors, guides, lifeguards; psychiatric aides and activity directors at mental hospitals; Bible and crafts teachers to migrants; child-care workers to severely mentally retarded children; normal control patients for the United States Public Health Service. In many of these positions they receive only $10 or $15 a month remuneration.

Both faculty and students believe that service is not valid unless given in Christ-like love. As they meet the physical, emotional, and spiritual needs among neglected persons, they establish an island of love to which others may come. This island of love stands out in bold relief in a world of conflict, poverty, discrimination, illness, loneliness, ignorance, sorrow, and defeat.

The example of one student, now a senior at Goshen College, shows what can happen when one takes part in a service assignment in his college years.

Lowell Nofziger, Archbold, Ohio, attended Goshen for two years, 1957-59. At that time his vocational plans were indefinite and his purpose for attending Goshen was unclear, except that he did have a strong interest in music.

After working a year, 1959-60, in Archbold, and getting married to Lucie Schrock, a student at Goshen 1958-59, he and his wife accepted a voluntary service assignment as leaders for the 12 VS-ers in Albuquerque, N. Mex. For two years he and Lucie were responsible for the operation of the unit and reported regularly to the personnel manager at the Presbyterian Hospital, where the VS-ers worked, to co-ordinate personnel between the hospital and the Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities, the agency under which the VS-ers were recruited.

Beside taking part in the unit, he and Lucie were Sunday-school and Bible school teachers and club and camp leaders for programs at Bethel Mennonite Church.

When the Nofzigers ended their VS in November, 1962, they returned to Archbold, where Lowell worked for nine months in a factory to build up resources to continue college.

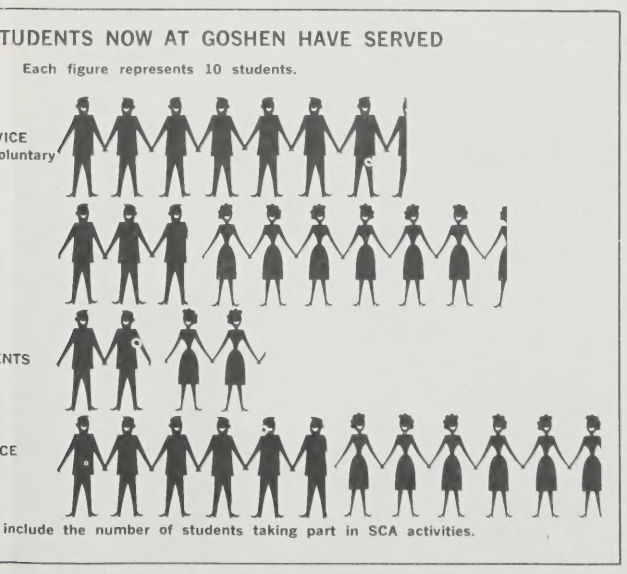
Lowell will be graduated this spring with a B.A. degree. His interest is social work. He says, "Now I've found college more purposeful and more meaningful because of VS. It was particularly because of VS that my major shifted from music to social work.

"As I look back VS brought to bear some influences that had been in my life all along. My experiences in working with other VS-ers in the unit and in the hospital stimulated in me a deep interest to prepare for a career in social work."

Lowell is not sure of his plans after college. He has considered graduate preparation, working for a family counseling agency, or school social work where he could work with the patterns of deviant or abnormal behavior in the development stage.

There is at least a bit of the maturity and depth of Lowell in each of the 321 Goshen students who have taken part in some service assignment. These 321, making up 28 percent of Goshen's present full-time student body, tend to add maturity and spiritual strength to the college population.

Many of these 321 students have taken advantage of their awakening and increased awareness of the needs around them that they got in service. Others, many of whom have not been able to accommodate a summer or long-term service assignment, have taken advantage of their increased awareness of the needs they see in an SCA assignment. Each, by taking part in service, is preparing for a vital, meaningful Christian life, to serve in the spirit of Christ.



Goshen College to Offer 39 Courses, 14 for Freshmen, This Summer

Goshen College is offering a greater number and larger variety of courses during its 1965 Summer Session for students who want to accelerate in their college study or who want to begin their college studies early.

Dean Carl Kreider said that the College is offering 14 freshman courses in the four summer terms for students who have just been graduated from high school. Choices of other courses give present college students added flexibility in their programs.

The offering of 39 courses from June 8 to August 27 make year-round attendance at Goshen now possible for more students. By accelerating their college programs, students can graduate in three calendar years instead of four, except in nursing.

Goshen follows the intensive plan during the summer. Students need not devote full time to college studies all summer, and can arrange to accommodate plans for trips and employment, if they wish.

Wenger Named to New Chair

Dean Ross T. Bender of the Goshen College Biblical Seminary announced the appointment of Dr. J. C. Wenger as professor of historical theology early this year. On a one year's sabbatical at Princeton Theological Seminary, Dr. Wenger will assume the new chair on his return in June. He will devote special attention to teaching and research in Mennonite history and doctrine and to the continuing development of the Mennonite Historical Library.

Board Discusses Clubs and Students

High lights of the board meeting of the Alumni Association of Goshen College on February 6 were two panel discussions—on alumni regional clubs and alumni-student relations.

C. P. Martin, Frank Ulrich, LeRoy Kennel, and Levi C. Hartzler told the board that the College must continue to communicate to the alumni and the church about buildings, departments, and programs. They added there is a practical limitation on how much one can dream, pray, think, and work Goshen College, but in the end what is important is not quantity, but quality.

The men pointed out that in the future regional clubs could be active not only for alumni meetings, but also as information centers to keep alumni up to date about the College and its financial needs and for recruiting prospective students.

J. Robert Kreider, Stanley J. Strycker, Mrs. Rhoda Amstutz Imhoff, and Prof. Roy Umble explored how the Alumni Association and the faculty could prepare students to be good alumni and how alumni could express allegiance to the idea of service in Goshen's motto, "Culture for Service," apart from service to the church.

They proposed that students take part in the Alumni Association, that they devote their extra energies to the cause of the Association, and that with the help of the Association they help to evaluate their experience at Goshen.

Associated Seminaries Choir Tours April 8-15

Twenty-seven men will visit ten churches in the Midwest on the 1965 Associated Mennonite Biblical Seminaries choir tour.

The week-long 1,790-mile tour to four states will begin on April 8.

In the touring group will be 22 men, director Orlando A. Schmidt, a faculty representative, and three international seminary students.

President in South On Sabbatical

Dr. Paul E. Mininger, Goshen's president, began a four months' sabbatical leave on January 22.

He and Mrs. Mininger are in the Southern United States, where Dr. Mininger is devoting his time to reading and the study of higher education. He will return to Goshen in late spring in time to deliver the baccalaureate sermon on June 6.

Dr. Mininger found it possible to schedule the sabbatical, authorized by the Board of Overseers in 1962, during the second semester of the school year.

Acting president in Dr. Mininger's absence is Dr. Carl Kreider, who is continuing in his official capacity as dean of the College.

Summer Courses Set For Seminaries

Goshen College Biblical Seminary will take part in the 1965 Summer School of the Associated Mennonite Biblical Seminaries. Classes will meet on the Mennonite Biblical Seminary campus, Elkhart.

From June 28 to July 16 Dr. Howard H. Charles will teach "Prison Epistles." Prof. Orlando A. Schmidt will teach "Christianity and the Fine Arts."

From July 19 to August 6 Dr. Jacob J. Enz will teach "The Minor Prophets" and Dr. John C. Wenger will teach "Doctrine of Scripture."

The courses are open to lay men and women, graduate students in non-theological fields, missionary appointees or missionaries on furlough, pastors, teachers, seminary students, or recent college graduates.

Jordan Visits Campus for Christian Life Week

Dr. Clarence L. Jordan, founder of Koinonia Farm, Americus, Ga., was speaker in Goshen's Christian Life and Renewal Week, February 8-12.

A south Georgia Christian leader and farmer with a graduate degree in agriculture from the State University of Georgia and a doctor's degree in theology from Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Dr. Jordan spoke to students and faculty in eight public services.

Dr. Jordan, who has centered his efforts on Christian race relations, called on the students and faculty to reaffirm their commitment to follow the way of Christian love in all human relationships. He called on them to continue their fight against ignorance and falsehood through the pursuit of truth, against injustice and greed through the sharing and identifying of themselves with the needy and oppressed, and against hate and bigotry through love and a constant attempt to understand those who differ with them and oppose them.

Other spiritual life events this spring were the 1965 Bible lectures and Church Vocations Emphasis Week.

March 18-21 Dr. Hugh Anderson, professor of Biblical criticism and theology at the Divinity School of Duke University, gave the 1965 Bible lectures on "The Epistle to the Hebrews." Church Vocations Emphasis was March 22-24.

Fifty-seven Take Part in Ministers' School

Fifty-seven ministers from 12 states and two provinces of Canada took part in the 14th annual ministers' school at Goshen College Biblical Seminary February 9-26.

The ministers studied Christian doctrines, pastoral leadership, and the Books of Ezekiel and I Corinthians. They took part in an outreach institute directed by the Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities and a mental health workshop set up by four therapists from Oaklawn Psychiatric Center.

Dr. A. Don Augsburger, of the department of Christian education of the Seminary, gave the Conrad Grebel Lectures, "Nurture in Focus," on the Christian nurture of youth.

Eighteen resource persons took part in the ministers' school. Dr. Paul M. Miller, of the department of practical theology, was director.

Sessions met Tuesdays through Fridays and ministers could return home for weekends if they wished. The Seminary gave free tuition to the ministers.

GC Thanks County for Exceeding $70,000 Goal

At a meeting on January 14, the 109 persons on Goshen's faculty expressed their appreciation for the generous support of 144 business and professional persons and special givers in Elkhart County in the 1964 Annual Giving Program for Goshen College Development.

The program exceeded the $70,000 goal by $2,348.50.

The faculty expressed appreciation to the nine-member President's Advisory Board, campaign co-chairmen Charles W. Ainlay, attorney at law, Goshen, and Basil S. Turner, president of CTS Corporation, Elkhart, and the many volunteer workers "for their counsel and excellent help in organizing and executing the 1964 Giving Program."

J. Robert Kreider, director of college relations, said the money will go toward capital expansion in the 3½-million dollar 75th anniversary program that Goshen announced last October.

He said the response of the community in exceeding its goal is a challenge to the alumni and to the Mennonite Church in supporting Goshen.

Luminus

By Ronald B. Schertz, President, Alumni Association of Goshen College

The story you are about to read is true. Like all good stories, this one has a moral and hero. But, unlike others, the hero is of such a varied character I am not sure of the correct name he should bear. It could be Alumnus, Alumna, Alumnae, or Alumni. In reality it is all of these; so I will just call him, or her, Luminus.

This is the contemporary story of the more than 10,300 men and women who have studied at Goshen College. It is easy to see that Luminus is many persons in many places. But all these persons have one thing in common. Luminus lives in a community that needs help to make it strong and stable and to keep it that way. The cold, hard facts of the matter are that the school, the church, local institutions, and civic groups need Luminus and his gifts—of time, of service, and sometimes, of funds.

Poor Luminus! An ordinary person might resent the demands and intrusions that the community makes. Even a superman might be tempted to say "No" to the requests that come to him for his help in community activities. But not Luminus, for he is a super-duper.

Deep down inside he has a heart of pure gold that expresses itself in patience and understanding. He actually considers each request for help from persons who represent the school, the church, local institutions, and civic groups.

Now why should even a super-duper like Luminus be bothered with such trivia? The answer is easy. The preparation he received from Alma Mater provided him with a brilliant intellect and understanding to enhance his wisdom. He realizes that all the talk about living an harmonious, purposeful, and socially responsible life in the spirit of Christ is not a bunch of gobbledygook, after all.

He is concerned about his responsibilities as a member in his church. He ponders whether he is doing his share to alleviate the shortage of teachers in the Sunday school. He knows there are needs for up to date facilities for the church building, and he is planning his giving to help make improvements possible. Beside, he is eager to paint and help in the maintenance tasks at the church, come spring cleaning. Too, he is active as a lay leader of the church and is happy to offer his counsel on matters financial as well as spiritual. And he takes part in the bimonthly fellowships, sometimes suppers, sometimes breakfasts, and other times just a cup of coffee after an hour of Bible study and prayer at a friend's house on a midweek evening.

Luminus discovered early that he must take part in his family. Such duties as administering aspirin, swabbing throats, altering clothing, repairing the iron, fixing the faucet, hearing confessions, and mediating conflicts came to be common daily practices. There was entertaining to do, groceries to be bought, a car to be kept running, the sidewalks to be swept, a vacation to be taken, a Saturday morning golf contest to be played.

His friends might say, "Eat, drink, and be merry today, for tomorrow may never come." Luminus does not bother with their ideas. He knows that life has meaning only as it is lived according to the will of God. He has examined for himself the meaning of every activity, whether work, recreation, social fellowship, prayer, or meditation, and found out that each has spiritual significance.

Luminus is proud to be a part of his community. Yet, when he sees its school facilities, he is concerned. The old two-story red brick elementary schoolhouse with its poor lighting and draughty rooms provides little incentive to recent teacher education graduates. Luminus asks a longtime member of the school board why other classrooms and buildings are not provided, and learns the sad truth: the voters will not support a bond issue at the polls.

And take the county home, for instance, situated a few miles out of town where the old people can be conveniently forgotten. Luminus could swell with pride, if his county placed the aged poor in private nursing homes. But he knows the facilities in his county, and he grows discouraged at what he sees. Alcoholics, aged infirm, dischargees from state mental hospitals, and parolees from state penal institutions are all a part of the population at the county home. The home is not even licensed to make it eligible for state and federal funds. And under present state restrictions, persons on welfare cannot be housed at the county home. Changes are necessary in food preparation and service, food purchasing and menu planning, environmental sanitation, and accounting if the home is to receive a license.

Luminus also knows about local pupils who are behind in their studies — some whose interest and schoolwork are hampered because they have trouble reading. He is interested in helping students who are poorly motivated and who cannot afford to pay for other kind of tutoring. He wants to help not only underprivileged Negro students but students of all races. A student in the sixth grade likes science, but is hampered in reading about it since his comprehension is that of about a third grader. Luminus meets with him for an hour twice a week. During such sessions the student brings in science books, and Luminus helps him understand them.

A glance at other community projects assures Luminus that there can be solutions to community problems. A local non-profit psychiatric center is doing its part in the struggle against the vast challenge of mental illness. Luminus does his part to urge community support of the center. A survey showed several hundred illiterates in the tri-county area who never learned to read because their health was poor when they were young, or their families moved often, making it difficult to adjust to schools, or for other reasons. Luminus gets acquainted with the Laubach Method of "Each one teach one." The local hospital clamors for more registered nurses, and anticipates an even greater need for them when wards in the new wing are to be opened in the latter part of the summer. Luminus writes to senior nursing students at Alma Mater and tells them about the shortage, working conditions, benefits, and the scale for salary increases.

Luminus finds his heart thumping with eager anticipation over the reality of a better community. His heart beats faster when he recalls the days at Alma Mater. "Christian discipleship is to be expressed in human relations, in the use of time, energy, material resources, and in devotion to the church and its mission. . . . The spirit of brotherhood is to be practiced in all personal and group relationships. . . . Life is to be lived with friend or foe according to the ethic of the love of Christ, who came not to be ministered unto, but to minister."

Mr. Average, or even super-alumnus, might retreat in dismay from taking a meaningful part in the activities of his church, his family, and his community, but not super-duper Luminus. He knows there are ways to provide for the needs of his church, his family, and his community by sharing his time, energy, and material resources.

Luminus knows that other persons with less strenuous jobs may be able to give more than he can; but he also readily admits that all Luminuses must bear their part of responsibilities to the church, family, and community. Even though someone else gives more time or money, Luminus isn't ashamed of his part. He knows that if all the other 10,300 Luminuses gave of themselves like he, in loving, sacrificial service to one's fellow men in the spirit of Christ, the world would be a better place to live in. Even though Luminus may not be able to be chairman of every committee, or leader of every team, he can rally his neighbors, carry bricks and mortar, or provide rides to church for the elderly woman down the street.

So Luminus replies in various ways to the telephone calls and requests for his services. Then, whenever he thinks of the college preparation he received, his heart is happy. Other persons' names may be prominently displayed in newspapers' headlines, but he knows that his own name is indelibly inscribed within the basic framework of his church, his family, and his community. He has a deep satisfaction in knowing that he is using his education that he received at Alma Mater to help others know Christ as Saviour and Lord and to be effective witness for Him.

At this point I leave Luminus, as he gazes out the window eagerly awaiting his next chance to serve. Thus ends the story of my hero. But it by no means ends his activities. Luminus lives this story over and over, month by month, year by year. Like all good super-duper alumni, Luminus is loyal to the tradition of Alma Mater, "Culture for Service," and to his church, family, and community, which needs him and his spirit of Christian brotherhood.

Alumni Gifts at $60,000

Gifts up to April 21 from alumni who have taken part in the current annual giving program have brought total contributions to the Alumni Faculty Fund to $60,006.40.

This amount is slightly past the 80 per cent mark of the Alumni Association's goal of $75,000 for this year.

John H. Liechty '41, secretary-treasurer of the Association, says, "If alumni giving continues at this level through the wrap-up of the self-solicitation, we should easily make our goal.

"And if the percentage of increase in the number of alumni contributors continues to increase above last year's, our eight Alumni Challengers will make good their promise to give $50 for each 1 per cent increase."

This year for the first time in Goshen's history, eight Alumni Challengers banded together to provide a stimulus to their more than 10,300 fellow alumni. They believe that more than 17 per cent of Goshen's alumni — last year's record — will contribute to the Alumni Annual Fund. They believe that their challenge —up to $500 from each one, or a total of $4000 for the eight—will increase the number of alumni who will take part this year. The limit for the Alumni Challengers was set at an increase of 10 per cent, a maximum gift of $500 from each.

The Alumni Faculty Fund is an important part in Goshen College's 75th Anniversary Development Program. It provides for retirement for teachers who accepted low salaries and gave a lifetime of dedicated service to Goshen. And it provides for sabbaticals—time away from campus every eight years (after the first ten) for each teacher to improve and renew himself to become a better teacher.

Still Room at College Preview

Registration for the Sixth Annual College Preview for high school juniors is still open.

Some 75 high school juniors (next year's seniors) are expected to take part in workshops, campus tours, choral and instrumental music, informal and organized recreation, social activities, and worship services during the week of June 19-26.

Special in Preview this year will be the opportunity to attend the opening session of the church-wide annual meeting of the Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities, on Goshen's campus June 24-27.

Parents of the juniors are guests of the College for the first weekend.

For more information, juniors may write to Leland K. Weldy, Admissions Counselor, Goshen College, Goshen, Indiana 46526.

Palm Sunday Tornadoes Spare Campus, But

Goshen College is deeply grateful to God that it was spared from the destruction of one of the three tornadoes that inflicted severe damage in Elkhart County on Sunday, April 11.

An aerial survey showed that one tornado, which cut a ¼ to 1 mile wide swath, to the east of the other two storms, entered Elkhart County north of Nappanee. It inflicted severe but scattered damage until it reached the Elkhart River near the NIPSCO canal, which adjoins Goshen College property. It then lifted from the ground and spared Goshen College, Goshen General Hospital, the High Park Medical Associates Building —the latter two within a block of the campus—and a large residential area of Goshen, then dipped down to hit the Goshen fairgrounds, lifted again, and then ripped at ground level through Lagrange County, killing at least eight persons, leveling more than a dozen houses and barns, and reducing the Shore Mennonite Church with its recent $110,000 brick addition to rubble.

48 Killed in County

Elkhart County sustained its worst tragedy in history on Palm Sunday, 1965, according to the local press. Forty-eight persons were killed—10 at the Midway Trailer Court between Goshen and Dunlap, 27 in the Sunnyside addition of Dunlap (where the Sunnyside Mennonite Church was also leveled), 6 in the small community at the junction of U. S. 20 and State Route 15 north of Goshen, 3 in Jefferson Place Subdivision north of Goshen, and 2 in the town of Middlebury.

Beside, 19 were killed in Lagrange County, 16 of them in the Shipshewana-Shore community.

Goshen General Hospital treated well over 100 of the more than 300 injured persons. Property damage in Elkhart County, according to the American Red Cross, exceeded $12,000,000.

Two Other Tornado Belts

The three tornadoes that struck Elkhart County and North Central Indiana comprised only one belt of destruction. Another belt of tornadoes, which reached from the western to the eastern boundaries of the state and into the Bluffton-Lima area of Ohio, wreaked havoc further south, and a third belt still further south battered Montgomery and Boone counties.

Palm Sunday tornadoes also damaged parts of Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, and Iowa, but Indiana was the most severely buffeted, and in Indiana, Elkhart County was the hardest h

Classes of '15, '25, '30, '40, and '55 are planning anniversary reunions on Saturday, June 5, and at the Alumni Banquet that evening as part of the activities of Goshen's sixty-seventh annual commencement.

All members of the Class of '55 will meet at Bethany Christian High School Saturday afternoon for their reunion. Nurses of the Class of '55 will also be together for breakfast Saturday at Miller's Country Restaurant, Goshen; on Sunday they and their families and friends will have a late afternoon lunch at the College Cabin.

Members of the Class of '25 will meet at the home of Mrs. I. E. (Gladys Loucks '25) Burkhart, 1610 South Eighth Street, from 2 to 4:30 Saturday for an afternoon of fellowship.

Plans for the reunions of the Classes of '15, '30, and '40 were incomplete as this went to press.

All alumni, regardless of class, are invited to take part in the annual alumni banquet in the Alumni Memorial Dining Room at 6 p.m., June 5.

The High Park Medical Associates Building that contains the offices of Goshen alumni Willard S. Krabill, M.D., John M. Bender, M.D., G. Weldon Troyer, M.D., Larry Beachy, D.D.S., and Keith Yoder, D.D.S., was used for treatment of some emergency patients.

Women at the College Mennonite Church utilized kitchen facilities for feeding the injured at High Park. On the days after Palm Sunday, the Church was used as a clothing and food distribution center, for local MDS headquarters, and for feeding the injured and members of clean-up crews.

One Student and Two Alumni Killed

Families of two Goshen College students suffered the loss of four of their members. Mrs. Myron (Jean) Krehbiel, of Middlebury, and her five months old son, Timothy, were fatally injured while in a car along State Route 15 north of Goshen at the Jefferson Place Subdivision. Surviving are her husband; another son, Michael, four; her parents, one brother, and a sister. Mr. Krehbiel is a full-time student at Goshen; his wife was a part-time student.

Willis Bontrager, and his wife, Grayce, were fatally injured in the wreckage of their home south of Shipshewana. They were the parents of two sons—Eugene, a sophomore at Goshen, and DeWayne, of Topeka.

Two alumni were also killed. They were LeRoy F. Yoder, and his wife, Florence. Mr. Yoder was graduated from Goshen in 1939. He had served as teacher, administrator, principal, and counselor in the Topeka-Honeyville area of Northeastern Indiana for 35 years.

Many alumni families sustained injuries and loss and destruction of personal property, cars, and homes.

When this went to press, Goshen College students, just returning from the ten days' spring recess, were considering ways they could take part in the clean up and reconstruction. Several carloads of students — boys and girls — were volunteering half days and whole days to help farmers clean up fields and woodlands from debris that was scattered by winds, some of which were estimated to have reached speeds of up to 600 miles an hour.

LINES FROM LIECHTY

If we could only hear ourselves as others hear us. An alumna of Goshen has stated aptly, "Goshen College alumni are Goshen College in location." The implied responsibility is tremendous but inescapable. Alumni are a voice of Goshen College as they speak to the issues of life in their communities.

Corporate Support For Our Colleges . . . Let's Get It Soaring Again . . .

Reproduced in its entirety from "A Message to American Industry"
by Donald C. McGraw, president of McGraw-Hill, Inc.

The chart on this page tells a disturbing story. It is that the percentage of their profits before taxes which U.S. business corporations contribute to our colleges and universities has been leveling off in recent years. This is unfortunate for higher education, for American business and for the community at large. The good health of all of them calls for a lusty growth in the share of pre-tax corporate profits going to higher education.

To be sure, the total number of dollars contributed by U.S. corporations to higher education, as estimated by the Council for Financial Aid to Education and as shown in the table on the following page, has continued to go up in recent years. But the speed of the ascent has slackened, and in 1964 the rate of contributions leveled off at the same percentage as in 1963.

In 1964 corporate contributions to higher education came to about .44 of one per cent of profits before taxes. Contributions for all purposes came to about one per cent. This is about one-fifth of the five per cent of corporate profits which the federal government exempts from income taxation when contributed to philanthropy.

An Optimistic Explanation

There are quite a few possible and partial explanations of the failure of corporate contributions to higher education to keep pace proportionately with the increase in corporate profits. One of the more optimistic of them is that the volume of corporate profits has risen rapidly since 1961, as the table on the next page indicates, and there hasn't been time to adjust programs of financial aid to education upward accordingly. Hopefully, the lag in the upward adjustment will be overcome in the years immediately ahead.

Another possible explanation of the lag is that the increase in federal expenditures for higher education, and the talk about much larger increases to come, have discouraged private contributions. So far as we know, there has been no comprehensive survey to test the validity of this explanation. But conversations with corporate officers suggest that there may be something in it. The attitude, not widely held, seems to be that if the federal government is disposed to pay for higher education, it is pointless to try to compete.

Key To Excellence

If they are to fulfill their role properly, however, our colleges and universities must have greater support both from government and from private contributors. Indeed, as government appropriations increase, the margin of flexibility and freedom from government requirements essential to top flight performance will depend increasingly on private benefactions. The relationship has been very clearly stated by President Robert F. Goheen of Princeton University in these words:

"Increasing federal aid to higher education seems inevitable in view of the magnitude of our national educational needs. As it develops, it must not be allowed to take over the show, to restrict the independence and self-determining power of universities and colleges, to undermine our historic commitment to demanding standards and the cultivation of high excellence in the individual. Only continuing and enlarged support from all possible private sources can enable us to withstand these dangers. And—what I think is too often overlooked — private support will do this best if it helps strengthen universities and colleges at their centers — i.e., in their ability to sustain and develop their own programs, according to their own best judgment, carefully and consistently over time."

Needed—More Hard-Headed Appeals

Most college and university administrators are acutely aware of the crucial importance of increased corporate contributions if their operations are to be adequately financed. But too many of them have been satisfied to make their appeals with beautifully packaged brochures, purveying wide-ranging and relatively unsupported generalizations rather than getting right down to sternly reasoned and documented demonstrations of their need of private support. The failure to make more hard-headed and hard-hitting appeals for corporate support may also account in part for its lagging.

What corporate contributions to higher education mean for the good health of the business community has been effectively underlined by Henry E. McWane, former President of the Lynchburg (Virginia) Foundry Company, in these words:

> "These expenditures represent low-cost investments in the security of the economic system in which we function, and in the sources of trained leadership for the future. As carefully planned business investments, they promise a substantial long-range return. This form of investment has small appeal to the business that expects a dollar-and-cents return to be reflected in its next financial statement. We plan to be in business longer than that."

Both for the welfare of higher education and of business there is a compelling case for getting that curve in the percentage of corporate profits moving on a sustained upward course again.

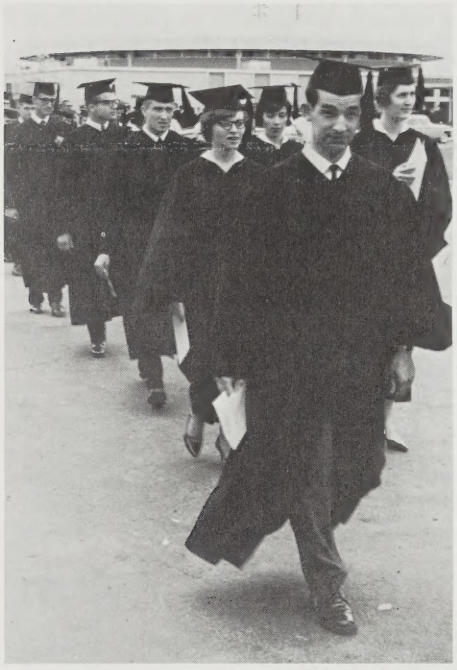
Bachelor's Degrees, New Jobs, Goals, And Graduate Study: The Class of '65



After the last diploma was given and the last "Congratulations" uttered, 237 graduates of the class of 1965 with majors in 24 fields left the Goshen campus — some to return this fall for seminary or to complete teacher certification requirements, 157 others for new jobs, and 40 others for graduate study at other universities and seminaries.

The graduates came from 22 states, four provinces of Canada, and seven overseas countries. They will go to 21 states, Washington, D.C., and Puerto Rico, three provinces of Canada, and eight overseas countries. The graduates, in a poll taken during the last month of school, said that they are working toward one of 18 broad vocational goals. Teaching — high school, elementary, or college — were in three of the top four places.

In comparison to the averages for all Goshen College graduates, the class of 1965 set records in at least two areas and maintained past records of another.

Forty seniors said they had been accepted for graduate study in universities and seminaries in the United States, Canada, and India, beginning in September. Eighteen others said they had already made application for graduate study, beginning in the summer or fall of 1966. The figures show that more than 24 per cent of the class — compared to the average of 19½ per cent for past classes — are anticipating full-time graduate study within a year after leaving Goshen College.

Eighty-nine seniors had accepted teaching positions by June 1. Five others said their applications were still in process. The class of 1965 is just a bit higher — ½ per cent — than past Goshen College class averages. The average is 39 per cent; 39½ per cent of the 1965 graduates are going immediately into teaching.

Thirty per cent of the seniors, or 71, came from homes within an area of 40 miles of Goshen. But 85 seniors — about 36 per cent — will make their homes in this area next year. Of these, 10 said they will teach or work for a year while their husbands (or wives) complete college or seminary or teacher certification requirements, and then will leave the area for their future places of service.

In the past the record for graduates making their homes near Goshen has hovered at about 40 per cent. But within a year, only about 30½ per cent of the 1965 graduates will live near Goshen. The response of the 1965 graduates shows their tendency toward greater mobility for jobs and places of service.

The percentages have changed significantly, but, surprisingly, the percentage of 1965 graduates with parental homes in the Goshen area is still about equal to the percentage of 1965 graduates who said they will make their homes in the area.

The count, when matched to the origins of students, showed that the percentage of the 1965 graduates coming to Goshen College from parental homes outside the 40-mile circle is equal, within ½ per cent, to the percentage of graduates who move beyond the 40-mile radius when they leave Goshen College.

President Mininger Tells 1965 Graduates "Christ Is Central to the Meaning of Life"

"College graduates are better read, healthier, and know more of the answers to the little questions of life than did their predecessors, but are they sure of life's big question. 'What is life all about?' " Pres. Mininger asked in his baccalaureate sermon.

"There is much to lead one to believe that life is absurd, futile, and meaningless. Man dare not believe that he can achieve his own destiny; he can no longer live alone with nature as he did earlier; he must now learn to live in the world he has created, and with the forces of self-destruction that he has created.

"How, then, does he search for the meaning of life?

"Some who search for meaning find inadequate answers. Some of them refuse to face the question; these live an animal existence.

"Others believe life has no meaning except to derive satisfaction from every moment. Some have faced the question and see no meaning at all to life. Some see life only as a chance to destroy others.

"Others find life's meaning in setting a goal and giving complete devotion to achieving that goal, no matter what the goal is.

"Some find meaning by the denial of one's self as an end in itself; close to these are those who find life's meaning in adhering to an external code. Christianity has become this for some, but the Christian way of life is not this.

"Then there are those who find meaning through self-giving for a humanitarian cause. But what happens here is that the cause becomes a mere extension of the ego, and man only fools himself if he expects deliverance from himself.

"The Bible describes man's preoccupation with himself. Man is enslaved by himself; as a result of his enslavement, he is constantly trying to get free and feels guilty for doing this. Besides, man is enslaved by death; afraid of the unknown, he can do nothing about death and is plagued from birth with a basic anxiety.

"Here the Gospel gives the answer to the problem.

Pres. Paul Mininger, the Rev. Roy S. Koch, of West Liberty, Ohio, James A. Miller, and the Rev. Amsa H. Kauffman, of Goshen, get ready for the processional for baccalaureate. Pres. Mininger delivered the baccalaureate sermon; Mr. Koch read the scripture and offered the prayer; Mr. Kauffman gave the invocation; and Mr. Miller was the song leader.

For Christ forgave us for our sins while we were yet sinners; Christ delivered us from self-love by His own love; Christ delivered us from death by His resurrection.

"Christ sends us, then, into life with a mission — to work with Him in the creation of a new humanity, making individuals new, and bringing into existence a new community that is bound together by love for man and for God."

More Than 300 Return to Campus For Alumni Day

Mrs. Thomas Diener, Mr. and Mrs. Ronald B. Schertz, Thomas Diener, toastmaster, Dean and Mrs. Carl Kreider, and Mr. and Mrs. John H. Liechty sat at the head table at the annual Alumni Banquet. Also on the program were Prof. C. Frank Bishop, Philip Osborne, J. Forrest Kanagy, Prof. Dwight Weldy, and the Rev. Lester Hostetler.

Honored at the Alumni Banquet were the 12 living graduates of the class of '15. Present to receive their 50-year plaques were Jacob Roy Allgyer, former executive secretary for Ohio's state-wide marketing association, of Dublin, Ohio; Aaron J. Eby, retired professor of finance, of Morrisville, Pa.; Leo D. Hershberger, former schoolteacher, of Manawa, Wis.; the Rev. Lester J. Hostetler, retired minister, of Sugarcreek, Ohio; the Rev. Amos E. Kreider, retired minister, of Goshen, Ind.; Mrs. Elmer Lehman, the former Lita Miller, retired schoolteacher, of Goshen, Ind.; Martha Martin, retired schoolteacher and social worker, of Elkhart, Ind.; Mrs. Arthur Slagel, the former Vesta Zook, retired schoolteacher, of Topeka, Ind.

Not present were Margaret Detwiler, formerly a nurse, of Fargo, N. Dak.; Chauncey H. Duker, retired school administrator, of McHenry, Ill.; Orie O. Miller, eastern Pennsylvania businessman, of Akron, Pa.; and Adam R. Rupp, sewer contractor, of Hollywood, Calif.

Prof. Charles Points Seminarians to the Optimism of Moses

"The quality to see the unseen, to dream dreams, to see what the ordinary eye cannot see — to see God like Moses saw Him — is a quality that is needed by those in church vocations," Prof. Howard H. Charles told seniors of the Goshen College and Mennonite Biblical Seminaries gathered for their class day service. His address title was "The Sustaining Vision."

"The persons with this quality will find new forms in which the old Gospel can more effectively be expressed and communicated to the modern mind.

"They will find fresh ways in which the church structure can be adapted to be more truly the body of Christ.

"They will discover areas of personal and corporate life where discipleship can be applied more rigorously and consistently.

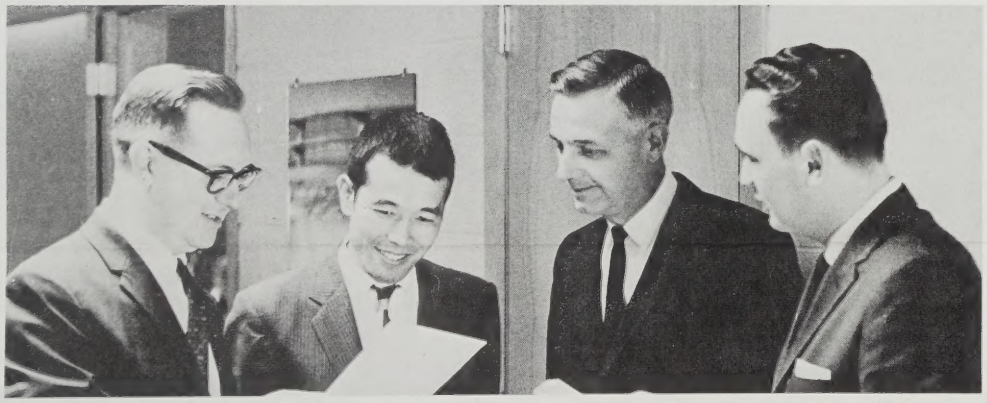
"They will discover the significant issues to which the prophetic Word needs to be spoken and those segments of human need where the hand of service must no longer be lacking.

"There is no frontier in the church's life, thought, and mission that has been fully explored and does not hold possibility for new adventure and achievement.

"We cannot be the church faithful to our mission if the hearts of at least some of us are not stirred by some vision of what under God might yet be and ought to be."

Prof. Charles added, "I covet for each of you graduates the ability to see what ordinary eyes cannot see but which you may help them see and thus help to bring God into reality."

Referring to Israel's earliest leader, he said, "Moses did not lie on his back in the palace gardens of Egypt on a summer afternoon seeing now elephants, then alligators in the clouds overhead. What Moses saw that his contemporaries didn't see was God. It was his awareness of God and his response to Him that shaped this man's remarkable life. God for him was not on the periphery of his vision but its center. This was not only the clue to Moses' life but is the clue to every life that has made or will make a significant contribution to the advancement of God's purposes in history.



Dean Ross T. Bender, chairman of the service for graduating classes of the Associated Mennonite Biblical Seminaries, Yorifumi Yaguchi, representative of the Goshen College Biblical Seminary class who gave his testimony, Prof. Howard H. Charles, main speaker, check the program while David D. Brunner, a member of the graduating class, looks on. Thirteen bachelor of divinity degrees and two master of religious education degrees were conferred by Goshen College Biblical Seminary.

"In the light of God's presence and in the knowledge of his purposes, we know ourselves to be called above and beyond everything else to be His servants. This is the basic category in which we need to think about ourselves, as men going out into church vocations.

"We have in the secret of Moses' remarkable life a clue also to the proper understanding of our mission in the world. If we can understand ourselves most truly only in the light of God's presence and purpose, does it not follow that here is the vantage point for the proper understanding of the needs of those whom we are called to serve?

"Finally, we have in the secret of Moses' remarkable life a clue to an incurable optimism. One might well ask as he contemplates the modern situation with its potential for race suicide 'Where can one find courage to keep his chin up?'

"It is not likely that genuine optimism can be sustained unless, like Moses, one can lift the eye from the human scene to the throne of the universe, to God who has not abdicated His purpose for the world and man, but will surely in His own time and way bring it to fulfillment."

Class of '65 Presents Three Gifts to Their Alma Mater

The class of '65, in a special chapel service on May 24 that was attended by the entire student body and faculty, presented three gifts to Goshen College.

Mrs. Joann Freed, on behalf of the seniors, designated the major part of the class gift for a mural or series of paintings for the new library. The rest of the gift is to provide television sets for the women's residence halls and for more equipment for the language laboratories.

Joan Krabill Gross, following the tradition of planting the ivy, said that the class of '65 will plant their ivy by the Memorial Library with the request that it be moved to the new library upon the completion of that building. Planting the ivy, she said, "symbolizes a part of our life which remains here as a heritage to those who follow in our steps."

Philip Osborne, president of the senior class, followed the tradition of passing the emblems — the College seal, the lamp of learning, and graduates' registry — to the juniors. Passing them to Gerald Sieber, president of the class of '66, Mr. Osborne said, "Keep these emblems safe by being aware of the spirit of Goshen College and by taking its motto, 'Culture for Service' seriously.

"They remind us of the purposes of Goshen College, of the dedication and sacrifice of the founders, and of all the persons who were graduated to serve in the spirit of Christ; the emblems call us to make a recommitment to Christ, whose spirit is the spirit of Goshen College."

J. Arden Godshall, on behalf of the seniors, followed Goshen's last tradition of commencement. Breaking the wreath, he said, symbolized "breaking our circle, placing our hands in His . . . on earth shall be broken arcs, in heaven a perfect round" (quoting Mrs. I. E. Burkhart '25).

He closed saying, "This class in breaking becomes the seed of a new planting season. We become the agents for the germination of knowledge, truth, and discipleship. The result of that germination, the yield of the future harvest, will not be judged on the basis of the Goshen College class of '65, but on the basis of individual commitment.

"With the regret that we haven't seized every opportunity for growth and development in our years here at Goshen College, we nevertheless break this wreath symbolizing our acceptance of the challenge of life before us, beyond the protection and advantage of this unique college community. Putting our hand to the proverbial plow we go forward with Christ to a fuller life of service."

"Sacred Service" Sung As Major Music Work

Goshen College's combined choruses, with 85 students, under the direction of James A. Miller, of the department of music, presented "Sacred Service," by Ernest Bloch, as the major choral work of commencement.

Samuel M. Jones, assistant professor of voice at the University of Wisconsin and who sings regularly as cantor in a synagogue, was the guest baritone soloist.

"Sacred Service" is a Sabbath morning service according to the American Union Prayer Book. The text emphasized worshipping the Lord God "with all thy heart, and all thy soul, and all thy might"; that "the Lord our God is our Father, our Ruler, our Redeemer"; and that the "Law of the Lord is perfect and just."

The final part of the service looked toward the time when Israel's God "shall be worshipped in all the earth, when unbelief shall disappear and error be no more, when corruption and evil shall give way to purity and goodness, when superstition shall no longer enslave the mind, nor fetichism blind the eye."

Dr. Littell Tells Graduates, "Live Historically"

Tilman R. Smith, of Hesston, Kans., Dr. Franklin H. Littell, of Chicago, Ill.; and Pres. Paul Mininger, along with Dwight Weldy, John S. Steiner, of Goshen, and Deans Ross T. Bender and Carl Kreider took part in the 67th annual commencement service at Goshen College Monday morning, June 7. Goshen College conferred 202 degrees and recognized 11 who completed their work in January and 39 who will complete their work by August 27, a total of 252 in the class of '65. Of these, 237 were graduated from the College; 15, from the Seminary.

Dr. Franklin H. Littell, professor of church history at Chicago Theological Seminary, delivered the commencement address, "Learning to Live Historically."

Dr. Littell has been a leader in the fight against Communism for nearly 25 years. He has published several major articles and books on the struggle with Nazi and Communist totalitarianism. He is editor of a scientific newsletter in the same field.

According to Dr. Littell, the encounter of Christendom with Communism is "the most serious challenge to Christianity since the rise of Islam over a thousand years ago, and probably since the day of Pentecost."

Dr. Littell told the capacity crowd in Goshen's Union auditorium, "We need our fathers in the faith. We not only need our fathers; they need us. Each generation not only transmits but also transmutes the heritage received.

"That is to say: History was not concluded in the 16th century, nor in the 4th century, nor even in the 1st century. We are not here to act out an anticlimax, but to fulfill faithfully and wisely and imaginatively the role which God long ago purposed for this generation. Without you graduates who are now 'commencing,' the whole history of Anabaptism, of the Free Church, of the Christian movement itself is abbreviated, truncated, imperfect.

"It was once the unique contribution of the Anabaptists to lift the religious obligation out of the hands of hierarchy and state-church professionals and assert the responsibility of a group ministry. The 'priesthood of every believer' which Luther and the other Reformers taught, they structured in a discipline of obedience laid upon every Christian by reason of the ordination of his baptism. It was precisely in this sense that the radical reformation moved on to gather a faithful people who shared a group ministry.

"Today, the traditional churches of Europe and America are turning to group ministries and a live concept of the 'Laos' — the whole Christian people — to find their way out of the dead end of culture-religion. In such a time, when the classical concerns of the Anabaptist-Mennonite-Free Church fathers are becoming common coin wherever Christians meet, we have every right to anticipate a renaissance of the Spirit in the years ahead which will mark this as one of the golden ages of the history of the church.

"You are graduating into a mature and wise responsibility in the church and society precisely at a time when the whole creation is groaning in travail, as it were, to behold the sons of God coming into their own.

"You are the sons and daughters of a great tradition. You have been given the liberty of Christian men and women.

"Rejoice with me to be found in this place and time, for there was never a generation in the entire history of the race to whom so much was given, in whom so much was entrusted."

Twenty-six Nurses Take Part in Annual Candle Lighting Service

Dr. C. Richard Yoder, specialist in pediatrics, of Elkhart, Prof. Verna Zimmerman, and Prof. Orpah B. Mosemann, director of Goshen's Division of Nursing, were in charge of presenting pins and the lighting of the candles during the senior nurses' class program on June 5.

Dr. Page Spray, specialist in ear, nose, and throat practice, of Elkhart, gave the major address. More than 350 parents and friends attended the class program.

The interests of the graduates ranged from being a school nurse to teaching nursing in a college or hospital. Most of the nurses stated their vocational goals were in staff nursing, public health, mental health, or maternal and child health nursing.

OpTor Clean Rallies Campus To Co-operation and Service

Students and teachers pulled and pushed tree-size limbs from fields. They picked up glass, pages from Bibles and encyclopedias, freezer containers, bent bedsprings, roof shingles, boards, and tree branches. They sustained cuts, bruises, scratches, bites, and sunburn.

After it was all over, one farmer plowed his field in later afternoon. A homeowner could begin rebuilding, once his tornado-demolished house was cleared from his home site. Others could begin building fences, once their fence rows were cleaned.

The Record, the College newspaper, said, "Above all, OpTor Clean was service, accompanied by a holiday spirit. The workers made GC's motto, 'Culture for Service,' live."

More than 90 per cent of Goshen's resident students and 75 teachers gave 5500 man hours to clean up sections of Elkhart County in OpTor Clean — OPeration TORnado CLEANup.

Students and faculty together took May 14 off from classes and end of semester studies and term papers and gave seven hours apiece to clean up after the Palm Sunday tornadoes that had killed 48 persons, injured more than 300 others, and inflicted at least 12 million dollars' worth of property damage — all in Elkhart County alone.

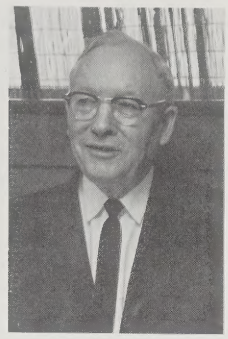
Dean Carl Kreider in a special chapel four days before classes were dismissed explained to the students that OpTor Clean "is not only an aspect of Christian service, but a part of an educational experience. Education involves not just studying, but the whole of living."

Before the day of suspended classes, several carloads of students and many faculty members — men and women — had already volunteered many half days and whole days to help farmers clean up fields and woodlands from debris that was scattered by the tornadoes and their 600 mile-an-hour winds.

Once the community was alerted that the College work force would be ready for a day's work, farmers and homeowners who had sustained property damage called for more than 1200 students and teachers. Even a 100 per cent response from the College family could not have provided this many.

The Record said, "OpTor Clean was a binding factor — students to students, students to professors, and college to community. It was the best thing that had happened to this campus in a long time."

Goshen College Honors Paul Bender and S. M. King



Dr. Paul Bender (left) and the Rev. Samuel M. King (right) received recognition for their many years of service to Goshen College and to the Mennonite Church last May. Both retired from the College faculty on June 30.

Prof. Bender joined the faculty of Goshen College in 1932 as professor of physics. Before that, he had taught 11 years at Hesston College. Beside teaching, Prof. Bender during his career at Goshen served as registrar and director of admissions, director of personnel services, chairman of the division of the natural sciences, and as acting dean.

His activities, however, were not limited to Goshen. He returned to Hesston College to serve as acting dean from 1958 to 1961. He also served as director of Civilian Public Service camps for Mennonite Central Committee during the Second World War, and as director of MCC in the Netherlands in 1956 and 1957.

His church-wide activities have included service to Mennonite Student Services Committee, which meets with Mennonite students on university campuses, and research director for the Commission for Mennonite Higher Education.

Since 1961 Prof. Bender has served part-time as educational co-ordinator for the Mennonite Board of Education, and it is to this job that he is retiring — to serve full-time as co-ordinator and director of research.

Began Teaching in 1924

Mr. King began his service to Mennonite higher education in 1924 at Hesston College and Academy where he served until 1930. From 1930 to 1933 he taught English and teacher education courses for the Philippine Bureau of Education. He taught at Goshen College during the summer of 1928 and in the spring and summer terms of 1934.

In the school year, 1934-35, Mr. King taught at Taylor University, an interim appointment before going to India in 1936, where he served under the Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities for 17 years. His appointments in India included principal of the Dhamtari Christian Academy, treasurer of the Mennonite Mission, secretary-treasurer of the Mennonite Relief Committee of India, Mennonite Central Committee representative on the Indo-American Agreement Relief Counsel, and president of the Mid-India Representative Christian Counsel.

On his return from India in 1953 Mr. King joined the Goshen College faculty as director of public relations. He has also administered the college testing program and assisted in the development program.

Mr. King will leave Goshen around August 1 to accept the position of chaplain at Mennonite Hospital, of Bloomington, Ill.

Robert Shaw Chorale to Present Handel's "Messiah" in '65-66 L-M Series

Robert Shaw Chorale, (above) the most recorded and probably the best known chorus with orchestra in the world, will present Handel's "Messiah" in Goshen College's Lecture-Music Series next year.

To be at Goshen on April 25, the Chorale has been praised by the Chicago Tribune as "the best thing that has happened to chorale music in a long, long time."

The Paganini Quartet, with their famous Stradivari, will appear at Goshen on January 31. They compose an ensemble in demand on four continents and well past the thousand mark in concerts played in the United States and Canada alone. The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin has said, "Their world acclaim is richly deserved."

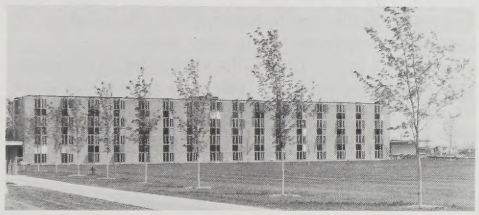
Other musical numbers are the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, to appear December 11; international folk singer Martha Schlamme, to appear at the College's Homecoming number on November 26; and the 65-voice Concordia Choir, directed by Paul J. Christiansen, to sing on February 17.

Film-lecturers will be Cleveland P. Grant and Telford H. Work. In his seventh appearance in the L-M Series, Mr. Grant will show his newest film, "Camera Gunning Across Africa," on native wild birds and animals of southern Africa, on January 6.

Mr. Work will picture the land of the pharaohs and the real Egypt today, as lived by the rural Egyptians, its 18 million fellahs, in his color film, "Pharaohs and Fellahs."

Dr. Josef Korbel, a native of Czechoslovakia and presently director of the social science foundation of the University of Denver and chairman of the university's department of international relations, will be the lecturer next year. He will speak on "Communist East Europe: Still a Satellite?" on March 7.

Summer Brings New Look To Campus



Young maple trees planted last fall on the lawn west of C. Z. Yoder Hall continue to build one of Goshen's most precious endowments—the quiet, wooded beauty of its campus site. In addition, the recreation facilities for Goshen's laboratory kindergarten east of the Church-Chapel were completed early this summer. This summer the ground and first floors of the Administration Building are undergoing extensive remodeling to provide larger areas for the admissions, business, college relations, central typing, and duplicating offices.

Summer Enrollment Up 27 Per Cent

Goshen College's summer session began June 8 with 217 students — an increase of 27 per cent compared to last year's number who studied during the summer's first term.

The first term ended June 25. The second term began June 28 and ended July 16. The third term is from July 19 to August 6; the fourth, from August 9 to August 27.

Goshen College increased its offerings during the 1965 summer session by 60 per cent to make year round attendance possible for more students. The summer sessions were planned so that a student takes one course for three weeks. This intensive plan offers maximum flexibility for those who can devote full time to study for a short period of time but who prefer not to be tied down for the entire 12 weeks of the summer.

Summer Brings 686 Students

A mid-morning coffee hour was one of the chances that Goshen provided for summer students for an informal get-together. Other activities included evening prayer meetings and watermelon afterward on the athletic field.

Goshen's first experience of enlarged Summer Session offerings was highly successful. Last summer 686 students registered in the 39 courses offered during the four terms. During the summer of 1964, 457 registered in 24 courses. The enrollment this year was 50 per cent above last year's.

Goshen's experience is in line with the national trend that significant numbers of college students and recent high school graduates are interested in year around attendance.

Goshen plans its summer sessions so that a student takes one course for three weeks. This intensive plan offers maximum flexibility for those who can devote full time to study for a short period of time but who prefer not to be tied down for the entire 12 weeks of the summer. But if a student chooses, he can take up to 12 hours of work by attending school all four terms, thus taking maximum advantage of the summer to accelerate his college program and graduate in three calendar years instead of four.

Fourteen Alumni Return To Teach This Fall

Of the 18 new teachers who joined Goshen's faculty this fall, 14 are Goshen College alumni. Eleven of the alumni have completed further study at leading American graduate schools and universities.

Dr. Robert C. Buschert '48, who has been on the faculty of Purdue University's department of physics since 1958, is the new chairman of Goshen's physics department. Prof. Buschert has carried out research with electron irradiated germanium, electron irradiated silicon, liquid tellurium, and liquid selenium, and published nine papers in scientific journals on his results.

Willeane Beyler '57, a former teacher at the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing, Philadelphia, joined the faculty of the Division of Nursing. She received her master's degree from Western Reserve University. Ruth Krall '62, a candidate for the M.S. degree at the University of Cincinnati, has also joined the Nursing faculty.

Dr. Weyburn W. Groff '45, S. David Garber, and K. Louise Myers are new members named to the faculty of the Biblical Seminary. Prof. Groff is associate professor of Christian education; he is also responsible for Seminary student affairs. Prof. Groff was a missionary teacher in India, 1946-64; the last 12 of those years he taught at Union Biblical Seminary, of Yeotmal, India.

Mr. Garber, assitant professor of New Testament in the Seminary, is from Lambertville, N.J., and is presently a candidate for the doctor of theology degree at Princeton Theological Seminary. Miss Myers, of Doylestown, Pa., is librarian of the Seminary; she completed work for the master's degree in library science at Drexel Institute of Technology last summer.

The Rev. Stanley C. Shenk '44, a former teacher at Eastern Mennonite College and a former pastor at West Liberty, Ohio, is teaching courses in English Bible and Old Testament in the College. Mr. Shenk has studied in the program for the doctor's degree at New York University.

John Hostetter, a practicing certified public accountant in Elkhart, Ind., and a graduate of Indiana University's M.B.A. program, joined the department of commerce.

Three of the new faculty members returned to their alma mater five years after their graduation. They are Abner Hershberger '60, who received the master of fine arts degree at Indiana University this year; Theron F. Schlabach '60, a candidate for the doctor's degree at the University of Wisconsin; and Berdene Wyse '60, who was graduated from the State University of Iowa with the master's degree last year.

Mr. Hershberger joined the faculty of the department of art. Mr. Schlabach, formerly from Goshen, Ind., will teach history; Miss Wyse, formerly from Archbold, Ohio, will teach women's physical education.

Lotus Hershberger '61, formerly from Fairview, Mich., and Beth Hostetler '61, formerly from Smithville, Ohio, have also returned to accept positions on the faculty. Mr. Hershberger received the master's degree at the University of Illinois last summer and is teaching in the departments of mathematics and engineering graphics. Miss Hostetler was graduated from Ohio State University with the master's degree; she has joined the faculty of the Division of Teacher Education.

Ronald E. Brunk '65, of Newton, Kans., and J. Harold Hess '65, of Manheim, Pa., were graduated from Goshen last June. Mr. Brunk is office manager; Mr. Hess is head resident of Clayton Kratz and C. Z. Yoder Residence Halls for Men.

Patricia Hostetter '64, formerly from Harrisonburg, Va., and a member of last year's national Mennonite Youth Fellowship Life team, is head resident of High Park Residence for Women and co-ordinator of recreation.

David Falk, formerly from Winnipeg, Manitoba, and who has studied at Detmold, Germany, joined the faculty of the department of music.

Ruth Kehr '50, formerly of Goshen, has accepted an interim appointment for first semester in the Division of Teacher Education. She received her master's degree from Indiana University.

Alumni Exceed Goal of $75,000 by $5,138

Alumni achieved and exceeded their $75,000 goal during the first year of Goshen's 75th Anniversary Development Program. John H. Liechty '42, secretary-treasurer of the Alumni Association, reported on June 30, at the end of the fiscal year, that alumni had contributed $80,138.36, an amount more than $5,000 greater than the projected goal. The more than $80,000 given this year is an increase of nearly $25,000 over last year's alumni giving.

Gifts designated for the Alumni-Faculty Fund totaled $43,105.01, leaving slightly over $37,000 that alumni had specified for a variety of other purposes, including general development, the new library, and scholarships and student aid.

The alumni, church, and Northern Indiana community all achieved their projected dollar goals during the first year of the 75th Anniversary Development Program.

First for Clubs

A gap that has been unfilled since the meeting of the first alumni club was filled this month. The Handbook for Goshen College Regional Alumni Clubs was published and distributed to presidents of the clubs about a week ago. A book of limited circulation, it will, however, affect each alumnus as he takes part in his regional club activities.

The handbook emphasizes a minimum of organization, but a maximum of participation — "Use me or lose me" is applicable to Maple Leaf alumni as it is to any organization, but so is the fact that a one-man club is seldom successful. Only four committees are suggested — arrangements, program, attendance, and nominating — and in smaller clubs it may be practical to combine the responsibilities of two or more of them.

Similarly, the handbook emphasizes that clubs give minimum attention to their internal financial matters. Clubs can operate on the "pay-as-you-go" plan for dinners, decorations, and publicity, and refrain from taking extra collections at meetings, which usually tend to hurt attendance at the next meeting.

The handbook contains a check list for a successful dinner meeting, program aids, and a list of ten vital factors for a successful club. But towering over all the details is the Alumni Association's desire to communicate the values of bringing together all alumni periodically with their mutual interests and common educational experience. The thinking and counsel of alumni can be of greatest value only if they are continually and correctly informed about their alma mater. — Z.

Alumni "College"

Alumni Day, 1966, will take on a new facet, come Saturday, June 4. Added to traditional early afternoon class reunions and the annual alumni banquet in the Alumni Memorial Dining Room in the evening will be a corps of speakers who will bring alumni down to date on the thinking and developments in a number of pertinent areas.

It is much too early to name names and print the schedule. But the broad outline is there — to make Alumni Day more meaningful and to add an important intellectual dimension to the day's fellowship and social activities.

Topics could range from an insightful discussion of broad social issues to a diligent presentation of scientific and technological developments and their implications for the Christian and his fellow man. Goshen's students benefit substantially from a similar selection of speakers from time to time during the school year who take part in the Chapel-Lecture Series, which has retained its high popularity in its mere three years of existence.

The idea is highly flexible at this early date, and the Alumni Association office will be more than eager to welcome suggestions. — Z.

Seven Classes Return For Alumni Day, 1965

The 50-year reunion of the class of '15 was at Pagoda Inn. Seated, left to right: Rev. and Mrs. Lester Hostetler, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Lehman, Homer North, Mr. and Mrs. Leo D. Hershberger; standing, left to right: Rev. and Mrs. A. E. Kreider, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Plank, Mr. and Mrs. J. Roy Allgyer, Miss Martha Martin, Mabel Miller Kurtz, Aaron Eby, Edna Metzler Smith, Vesta Zook Slagel.

More than 300 persons took part in Goshen's Alumni Day activities last June 5 during Goshen's 67th annual commencement.

Features of the day were reunions of the classes of '11, '15, '25, '30, '35, '40, and '55.

Of the ten original members of the class of '11, six are living and were preesnt — Dr. Samuel Burkhard, of Tempe, Ariz.; Rossie Hostetler Edwards, of Tarpon Springs, Fla.; Mabel Miller Kurtz, of Chicago, Ill.; Prof. Alvin J. Miller, of Kent, Ohio; Ruth Ebersole Rasmussen, of North Tonawanda, N.Y.; and Edna Metzler Smith, of Dayton, Ohio.

The Rev. and Mrs. I. E. Burkhart, of Goshen, were hosts for the class of '25. Mr. and Mrs. J. Forrest Kanagy, of Biglervile, Pa., were hosts for the class of '30 at Miller's Country Restaurant; 33 were there.

Prof. and Mrs. Atlee Beechy and Mr. and Mrs. Levi C. Hartzler were hosts at the Beechy residence to the 25 persons from the class of '35. Forty from the class of '40 met at the College Cabin for a chicken dinner. Sixty-five from the class of '55 met at Bethany Christian High School for their reunion.

Honored at the Alumni Banquet were the 12 living graduates of the class of '15. Eight were present to receive their 50-year plaques (story in July Bulletin).

Toastmaster for the banquet was Thomas Diener '55, of the department of admissions of the Law School of Columbia University. Dr. Carl Kreider '36, dean of Goshen College, gave the address, "Goshen College — Past, Present, and Future," to the more than 200 persons at the banquet.

The Dean quoted from the NCA examiners' report that found Goshen College's strengths in a highly qualified faculty, financial stability and increased contributed support, healthy attitudes in the student body, and an adequate physical plant. He closed by saying, "With the grace of God, Goshen College will have a future."

Sixty-five met at Bethany Christian High School for the ten-year reunion of the class of '55.

Full-time Enrollment Reaches 1079—A New Record at Goshen College

Goshen College's full-time enrollment reached a record-breaking 1079 students this fall—and with it came a corresponding cramp in men's and women's housing and in library facilities. There are 1047 in the College; 32 in the Biblical Seminary.

Forty-four per cent of the students—332 freshmen plus 140 transfer students—are on campus for the first time.

The rest of the campus population is continuing students (577) plus students who have been readmitted (40) after one semester or more of absence.

The student body, including College and Seminary, is 127 students larger than last fall's, or an increase of 13 per cent. Interestingly, the estimated full-time enrollment for the College this fall, made from studies in 1962, was to be 935 students, or a modest increase of 2½ per cent above last year's College population of 912.

The housing situation at Goshen this fall is tight. Men's housing is completely filled, and 13 are in East Hall, used as an apartment for a student-family last year. Besides, 20 men are living off campus in private homes.

Women's housing is even tighter. Kulp, Coffman, Westlawn, and High Park residences are completely filled, and women are also living at Shoup House, Howell House, and Kenwood House—the latter two used last year for faculty families or staff persons—and 37 women are living in eight private homes or under special arrangements.

Library facilities are hardly adequate for the campus population of 1965-66. Built in 1940 to accommodate a student body of about 400 students, the library does not have the shelf space or table space to adequately meet the needs of Goshen's growing student body.

The increase in students points to the timeliness of Goshen's 75th Anniversary Development Program. The remaining contributed portion—$175,000—was paid this past summer on the Kratz Residence Hall for Men, and the College can now concentrate its efforts on the new library and the new men's and women's residence halls.

Women's Residence Hall—Artist's Sketch

The new residence hall for at least 100 women has been sited on the north campus east of and facing Westlawn. The new residence hall for 132 men will be on the east campus in the C. Z. Yoder and Clayton Kratz complex. The new library, sited at the geographical center of campus, between the Arts Building and the Church-Chapel, will have a capacity of 600 readers at one time (with study carrels for at least 450 of them) and shelf space for 205,000 volumes.

Goshen's faculty and students today are co-operating closely to obtain maximum use of a campus that must expand in many ways to serve the increasing numbers of students who recognize the value of Christian higher education. Further, Goshen sees no let-up in the growth of student enrollment. The growth will continue to be fed by rapid increases in both number and percentage of college age young persons attending college, a trend that is being observed nationwide.

Goshen College is now asking the Mennonite Church, alumni, and the community to respond as generously as possible in providing more than $3,000,000 required to serve in the years immediately ahead the increasing numbers of students wanting Christian higher education.

According to the Danforth Report, What Is the Future of Goshen College?

The Danforth Foundation's Commission on Church Colleges and Universities issued early this year a preliminary report on church-related higher education in the United States. The study, begun three years ago, was comprehensive, searching, and forthright. Goshen College, vitally connected with the Mennonite Church, is one of the 800 church colleges that is among the 2,100 institutions of higher education in the United States.

The Danforth Report pointed out five assets of the church colleges, all indications of good health that were hardly present 10 years ago. In the first major session of Goshen's faculty retreat last month before school opened, Dean Carl Kreider presented these ideas and related them to Goshen's program.

1. Physical and financial resources are appreciably better at most church colleges today than they were 10 years ago. In connection with this Dean Kreider said that Goshen is in a sound and stable financial position. Goshen has been able to balance its budget each year, owing to the frugality of all college operations, and, in addition, build seven major buildings and remodel or enlarge three others in the past ten years.

2. Records made by graduates in professional schools and on college faculties show that church colleges have produced more than their share. According to a study made by the U. S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, Goshen's rate of furnishing the nation with medical doctors is higher than the overall national average for all colleges and universities and higher than the national average for all colleges with liberal arts and no professional schools. Goshen enjoys a similar favorable position in the preparation of college professors.

3. Church colleges have been responsive to leadership, owing to their small size and absence of unwieldy administrative structures. Dean Kreider said that at Goshen the administrative officers are in rapport with each other and the faculty, and that each is well-prepared academically. The administrators and the faculty bring to their jobs and classrooms a rich composite of learning and experience. Forty-three graduate schools at distinguished universities in this country and abroad are represented on the faculty.

4. Church colleges, according to the Danforth Report, emphasize the importance of the individual. At Goshen the student-faculty ratio has never been high; this has assured personal guidance for each student from his teachers. Further, the Student Personnel Office co-ordinates students' social and spiritual growth, equally as important as their intellectual growth. To spend all its time attempting to develop the intellect of the students, leaving their spiritual and emotional needs unmet, would be to ignore the realities about humanity to which Goshen is committed as a Christian college.

5. The Danforth Report says that church colleges have the right to teach religion without interference from the state. Goshen believes it is important that it serve as an intellectual and spiritual center for the renewal of the life of the church and to make the church relevant to the needs of laymen today. At the same time, Goshen believes it must maintain its independence from the state. From its beginning, the Mennonite Church has believed strongly in voluntarism in matters of faith as contrasted to the use of the power of the state to achieve religious and moral objectives.

Beside the assets, there are also weaknesses. The Danforth Report said the small college is simply not able to have as broad a program as the large institution.

Dean Kreider answered this by saying that Goshen has faced the problem of a large number of courses versus an intelligent reshaping of the curriculum. Goshen has attempted to maintain a middle-of-the-road pattern by offering about 500 courses; colleges of similar size and purpose have a somewhat greater proliferation of courses — an average of 670 — making for overworked teachers, which in turn is a basic cause for them to go elsewhere for teaching positions.

Goshen has channeled its energies toward a reshaping of the curriculum. Owing to lack of student enrollment in certain areas, the College has discontinued the agriculture curriculum (students now major in biolo-

Largest Freshman Class in Goshen's History

1. Where did the freshmen come from?

Of the 332 freshmen, three-eighths, or 122, came from Indiana. Eighteen other states are represented, and also Canada, Jordan, Brazil, Taiwan, and Kenya.

2. More women than men.

There were 22 more women than men among Goshen's 332 freshmen. The difference in the figures of 177 women and 155 men reflect the sizable increase in the freshman pre-nursing enrollment.

Fifty of the freshmen were from homes in which either or both parents were alumni; but 123 freshmen have brothers or sisters presently at Goshen or who are alumni of Goshen.

3. Why did they come?

On their application forms the freshmen listed some 80 areas of vocational interest. But broadly speaking, the areas could be classified in about 29 general vocational fields.

Interestingly, about one out of every four freshmen indicated the teaching profession—elementary, secondary, or college levels, or special education, such as working with deaf persons—as their first interest. Next was nursing—about one out of every six freshmen listed this area first. And about one-eighth of the class, as is often the case with freshmen, still had not made up their minds. This is to be expected, because college for many persons is a time to discover one's interests and abilities.

Other fields mentioned were: history and social studies, 9; music, 7; art, 5; English, speech, and foreign languages, 5; the ministry, 5; physical education, 5; psychology, 4; secretarial services, 4; social work, 4; veterinary science, 4; architecture, 2; law, 2; medical technology, 2; dentistry, 1; drafting, 1; government service, 1; mortician, 1; sociologist, 1; no definite vocational interest, 43.

4. What churches do they attend?

Goshen College was founded as a college home for young persons of the Mennonite Church, and this is reflected by the fact that 74 per cent of the freshman class is of Mennonite background. At the same time, Goshen College sincerely welcomes Christians from other churches and other persons of high moral character. Twenty-three denominations and faiths are represented in the freshman class.

5. How did they rank in high school?

High school rank is one indication of past academic success. Seventy Goshen freshmen were in the top 10 per cent of their graduating class. Among them are 15 valedictorians and 13 salutatorians. While Goshen is eager to serve these persons of exceptional ability, it is also committed to serving qualified persons in a broad range of competence who can profit from higher education as they prepare for responsibilities as substantial citizens.

High school rank was not available for 10 entering freshmen.

The freshmen came from high school classes that had as few as nine seniors and ranged to classes that

Professor Henry D. Weaver Jr. Named to New Post at Goshen College

Dr. Henry D. Weaver Jr., professor of chemistry at Goshen College, has been appointed as Assistant to the President—Program Evaluation and Planning.

Dr. Paul Mininger, president of Goshen College, said the new staff position has been created for the purpose of assisting him in evaluating the present program of the College as well as to assist in the co-ordination and direction of long-range planning.

Increased responsibilities in other areas of the College's operations, owing to the 75th Anniversary Development Program and the rapid growth in the size of the student body over the past several years, makes it impossible for the president to continue the coordination of institutional research and planning without additional staff help. The action was approved by Goshen's Board of Overseers at its last meeting.

Prof. Weaver was on a one-year leave of absence as technical advisor at San Marcos University, of Lima, Peru, last year. In addition to his teaching, he has done research in physical chemistry in a number of areas. He is also secretary for international education services of the Council of Mennonite Colleges and a member of the administrative committee responsible for national and international services of Mennonite Broadcasts, Inc.

Goshen Helps 'Disadvantaged Students' in Small, Firm Way

In his annual report a year ago, Pres. Mininger called for an expanded program at Goshen College that would help the culturally disadvantaged American student.

This fall, Goshen has taken a small but firm step to meet the tremendous needs among the Negroes, Puerto Ricans, Mexicans, and other national groups, and to share its facilities and financial resources with them that they may obtain Christian higher education.

For the first year of its program, Goshen College selected five out of 12 applicants for full-tuition scholarships. Sadly, the seven who were not admitted had very weak academic records and would have required a large investment by the College in special tutoring or remedial clinics, a step it could hardly take in the first year.

Altogether 13 students at Goshen might be classified in the category of "disadvantaged American students"—disadvantaged only because the color of their skin or the ancestry of their parents have kept them from being accepted as first class citizens in their American communities and from the many cultural advantages in those communities.

A wide range of abilities and financial need is represented in the small group. While most of them have little or no financial resources, one of them who has been out of school several years has saved a few hundred dollars. Another student, strong scholastically, was ineligible for aid because of the parent's relatively high income. It is clear, then, that not all the students are disadvantaged in the extreme sense.

Goshen had to search for different procedures to measure aptitude for college study because neither of the two standard measures—rank in class and scholastic aptitude test scores—may be used as predictors of success in college with the same degree of confidence as with advantaged students. Inferior standards in Negro high schools, both in the North and in the South, and the cultural bias of the tests distort the meaning of these indices.

In the group are two students receiving substantial aid from community agencies. Although five are get-had as many as 938. The average freshman (really a statistic) came from a class of 151 students. At the same time it is interesting to note that 303 freshmen—slightly more than 90 per cent of the class—came from high schools that had fewer members in their senior classes than the class in which they are presently freshmen.

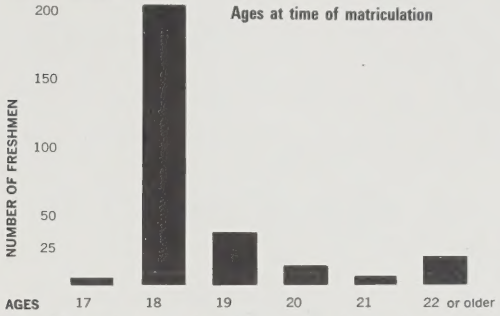
6. How old are the freshmen?

Reflecting the traditional college age, 206 freshmen—or five-eighths of the class—were 18 at the time of matriculation.



7. How did the freshmen rank on the nationally administered Scholastic Aptitude Test?

Goshen College requires every freshman applicant for admission to take the Scholastic Aptitude Test offered by the College Entrance Examination Board. (Those unable to present SAT scores make alternate arrangements with the Admissions Office.)

The SAT helps Goshen College to know the abilities of the freshmen. The score itself is a guide, and is considered with the student's high school record, references, application, and other information. High schools differ in academic standards and marking systems, while SAT scores compare each freshman with all others, nationwide, who are taking the test.

Results on the SAT include scores for the verbal (English) sections and for the mathematical sections. The meaning of an SAT score—how high or low it is—is best understood by comparing it with the score made by other students in significant reference groups, such as all students who enter college.

The average scores by Goshen's freshmen on the SAT compare very closely to scores of college-bound freshmen across the country, as the two graphs show.

The scores of seniors who entered Goshen College (solid line) are compared with those of a large sample of all seniors across the country who later entered college. These scores are higher on the average than the scores of all high school seniors, which include those who did not enter college.

The average scores shown below show the very small differences that exist between Goshen's freshmen and all college freshmen in the nation. For example, in the verbal section, 10.8 per cent of Goshen's freshmen rank in the upper 10 per cent of the nation. A bit farther right, the graph shows that 37 per cent of Goshen's freshmen rank in the upper 40 per cent of the nation's freshmen. At no place is the percentile difference between Goshen's freshman scores and the national scores greater than three points.

The story is similar for scores on the mathematical sections. Here 6.1 per cent of Goshen's freshmen rank in the upper 5 per cent of the nation's freshmen; farther right, the graph shows that 26 per cent of Goshen's freshmen rank in the upper 30 per cent of the nation's freshmen. At no place is the percentile difference between Goshen's freshman scores and the national scores greater than 4 points.

8. Freshmen Receive Over $17,000 in Scholarships and Grants and Over $44,000 in Loans.

Scholarships and grants totaling $17,100 were awarded to 106 freshmen—almost one-third of the class. Scholarships and grants are both gifts, with no obligation for repayment. Scholarships are given on the basis of outstanding scholastic achievement; grants are given to worthy and needy freshmen who display good student potential.

Both scholarships and grants vary depending on need. The maximum amount of any grant is about one-third of the cost of tuition, but it may go as high as full tuition for students of extreme need.

Goshen named 10 Menno Simons Scholars in this year's freshman class. The stipend for Menno Simons Scholars ranges up to $250 a year, depending on need, and is contingent on satisfactory academic performance and character development. A total of $1700 was awarded to this year's Menno Simons Scholars:

Stanley Beachy, of Grantsville, Md.; Bradley Boyd, of Millersburg, Ohio; Susan Clemmer, of Souderton, Pa.; Phyllis Detwiler, of Perkasie, Pa.; Dallas Miller, of Applecreek, Ohio; Marvin J. Miller, of Middlebury, Ind.; David Rosenberger, of Quakertown, Pa.; Ted Stuckey, of Berne, Ind.; Michael Yoder, of Eureka, Ill.; and Grant Zehr, of Fisher, Ill.

Goshen College also named 66 Freshman Scholars; those who rank in approximately the upper 10 per cent of their high school graduating class receive awards ranging in value up to one-third of tuition for their freshman year. A total of $9400 was awarded to this year's Freshman Scholars.

A total of $6000 was awarded to 30 freshmen in Goshen's program of grants.

Seventy-one freshmen received a total of $44,485 in loans. Goshen College has its own loan plan, and also administers two government loan plans—the National Defense Education Act and Nursing Student Loans.

Many freshmen also have accepted campus work assignments of up to 10 hours a week. They are desk receptionists, dish handlers, food servers, dining room cashiers, and residence hall janitors. Their pay ranges from $.70 to $1.25 an hour.

ting financial help from the College, only two received full-tuition scholarships plus loans. The others, however, are guaranteed full-tuition scholarships if they do satisfactory work.

Two are on special part-time study and part-time employment to test the feasibility of another variation of the arrangement to help students.

The 13 students come from the cities of Chicago, Gary, Elkhart, and New York, and smaller communities in Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Illinois. One was president of his high school senior class. One was recommended to Goshen by a GC alumnus. Nine learned of Goshen College by taking part in Mennonite Church activities and later becoming members. The students this year come from Spanish, Negro, and Jamaican backgrounds.

Church-College Relations Subject at Student Leaders' Retreat

At the student leaders' retreat on September 10 some 80 students and faculty members grappled vigorously with the question of how to make Goshen College's church-relatedness meaningful to both students and the Mennonite Church. So intense was the afternoon session that chairman Russel A. Liechty was not permitted to end the discussion until it had cut into the scheduled recreation period by 40 minutes, something rarely allowed by college students often more eager to swim, boat, or play softball than sit in long academic discussions.

Dean Carl Kreider, in the first major address, "The Meaning and Purpose of the Church College," said, "The church college is the last place where a community of scholars dedicated to a sense of common vision can be realized. A major unifying force in the state university is football. Thus the very homogeneity of faculty and students, who come from much the same background and which in a sense could be construed as somewhat of a weakness, is also a great strength of the church college . . . The limitation of funds that a church college has annually forces that college to do only a limited number of things—and do them well . . . A big university is a cafeteria without a dietician. The immature student does not select his diet adequately. The church college, on the other hand, has the opportunity of presenting an integrated world view to its students."

Evie Yoder, senior from Kalona, Iowa, and vice-president of the Student Christian Association, responded to the dean. "It is easy to make some fine, noble statements about the purpose and meaning of Goshen College, or any church college . . . To me, the extra element of meaning and purpose of a church college is to give students meaning and purpose for living."

Dave Swartz, junior from Cromwell, Ind., and vice-chairman of the social commission of the Community Government, said, "Goshen College is the channel or tool through which a group of students seek out the meaning of God . . . The only way for Goshen College to go in the future is to be a dynamic school of Christian faith. This is a must."

The second main presentation of the day was by J. Robert Kreider, director of college relations, on the subject, "Keeping Goshen College Church-related."

He told the students, "Goshen College gets substantial support from the church. I hope the bread-and-butter money for expansion and operations of Goshen will continue to come from the church, and that this will help the relationships become stronger between Goshen College and the church . . . The most effective means of keeping Goshen College church-related is to give the church the product it needs . . . Ultimately, the faith you hold, the quality of your life in Christ, and the genuineness of your desire to function as one member of the body of Christ will all manifest themselves. You will find yourself and fill your place in the church and at the same time do more to strengthen church-college relations than in any other way."

'Discipleship, 1965' Theme

Dean Atlee Beechy spelled out his creed in the first week of chapel services in a series called, "Discipleship, 1965," that was based upon the Bible and drew upon 40 other sources including theologians, historians, philosophers, journalists, and his conversations with students, teachers, and young persons whom he has met in his travels.

During the week, traditionally known as Perspectives Week, interest was high. Students and Dean Beechy came together informally each day in the late afternoons to inquire further into the new and creative ways to carry the "good news" of the Gospel into the marketplace, the academic halls, the home, and into the social, economic, and political areas of life and, further, to find out how Christian discipleship can be made a serious matter on Goshen's campus.

By his request, this school year will be Dean Beechy's last as Dean of Students. Next year he will devote his time to co-ordinating student counseling services, teaching, and research. Dean of Students next year will be Dr. Russel A. Liechty, former dean of men and presently associate dean of students.

"Discipleship, 1965" spoke poignantly to students and teachers and at the same time revealed a bit of the struggles and Christian pilgrimage of a dean of students who has dedicated his life to the Christian welfare and growth of some several thousand college students and some few thousand volunteers in the Mennonite Church's international and national service programs.

Dean Beechy challenged the campus community to learn the meaning of being a disciple. "It is the concept of discipleship—the complete and total response of the individual to the mercy and grace of God—which lies at the heart of the approach to education at Goshen College.

Congregation Gives Goshen Freshman $1,000 Toward College Expenses

A gift of $1,000 to "express the congregation's appreciation for the dedicated services of the pastor and his family to the church through the years of its growth and progress" was made last June 13 to Veronica Roth, daughter of Pastor and Mrs. Roy D. Roth, of Siletz, Oregon. Miss Roth is a freshman at Goshen.

Salutatorian of her high school class, Miss Roth was president of the Logsden MYF, church librarian, children's choir director, Sunday-school and vacation Bible school teacher, and a member of the church chorus.

The gift presentation, made at the close of the morning service, surprised Miss Roth and her family. John Jantzi, secretary-treasurer for the trustees of the church, told her that the gift was to help pay college expenses at Goshen. Miss Roth was also named a Freshman Scholar at Goshen.

Pastor Roth, a music teacher in the Siletz schools, has served the Logsden church since 1959 and has given his time and energies to the work of the church without remuneration for about four years. He was president of Hesston College 1951-59, and has been a member of national committees studying music and worship practices in the Mennonite Church.

Freshman Parents' Weekend Set for November 20, 21

Goshen College will be host to parents of all freshmen at the 17th annual Freshman Parents' Weekend, November 20, 21.

The annual event gives parents a special time to visit their sons and daughters, to get acquainted with the teachers and administrators of the College, and to renew old friendships and make new friends.

High lights of the weekend will be a question and answer session with Pres. Mininger, a dinner and program in the Alumni Memorial Dining Room on Saturday evening, and a special vesper service Sunday afternoon. In charge of general planning for the weekend is Dr. Atlee Beechy, dean of students.

Admissions Counselors to Visit Students and Their High Schools

Leland K. Weldy and John M. Zook, Goshen College's admissions counselors, began October 1 to visit high schools and their college advisers and to talk to juniors and seniors about attending Goshen College.

Mr. Weldy visited schools and students in Northern Michigan and the Upper Peninsula Oct. 1-6, and Central and Southern Indiana Oct. 13-16. Mr. Zook visited Northwest Pennsylvania and New York Oct. 4-8. The rest of their schedule for the year is:

Oct. 18-22	Lancaster County and Franconia Area, Pa.	Mr. Zook
Oct. 25-30	Central Illinois	Mr. Weldy
Oct. 27, 28	Franconia Area, Pa.	Mr. Zook
Nov. 8-13	West Liberty, Plain City, and Columbus, Ohio	Mr. Weldy
Nov. 15-19	Belleville, Johnstown, and Springs, Pa. Hagerstown and Cumberland, Md.	Mr. Zook
Nov. 22-24	Central and Southern Illinois	Mr. Weldy
Nov. 29-Dec. 1	Archbold and Wauseon, Ohio	Mr. Zook
Dec. 6-11	Central and Southern Michigan	Mr. Weldy
Dec. 13-17	Eastern Ohio; Scottdale, Pa.	Mr. Zook
Jan. 10-14	Elida, Lima; Wayne and Holmes County, Ohio	Mr. Zook
Jan. 10-15	Northwestern Indiana and Chicago Area	Mr. Weldy
Feb. 1-5	Northern Illinois and Eastern Iowa	Mr. Weldy

Also included in their schedules are visits to Northern Indiana high schools between their trips.

The two men are ready to talk to interested students about entrance requirements and costs at Goshen, the 30 preprofessional and major fields Goshen offers for study, the Campus Open House Weekends for high school seniors (set for Nov. 12, 13 and March 18, 19 this year), and the week-long College Preview next June 18-25.

gy), the associate in arts degree program (a two-year program), and the Christian education major and bachelor of religious education degree (now offered on the graduate level in the Biblical Seminary).

The second weakness, according to the Danforth Report, is too much homogeneity both of faculty and students. Because both students and faculty are drawn from the same religious-cultural background, the students, it is said, get a distorted view of the kind of world they live in.

Dean Kreider, however, pointed out that one-fourth of Goshen's students come from among applicants who are Christians from other churches and other persons of good moral character. Further, Goshen serves a number of international students who have come from 35 countries. About 20, not counting Canadians, study at Goshen every year. In addition, faculty members have a wide range of experience; they represent a diversity of graduate schools, and more than half of the teachers have taken part in service assignments throughout the world.

Pres. Mininger, in the closing address of the retreat, said, "The Danforth Report has its inadequacies. The profit for Goshen College from studying it will come from developing plans of precision within the next three to five years that will help us to see the kind of college Goshen must become. We will involve the boards of education and overseers, alumni, faculty, and students."

Goshen's president said the future of Goshen College will be tied to the Mennonite Church. "We must keep in mind the work of our congregations and how they might be more effective. We must examine the quality of our response to the Gospel and the quality of our church life. We must help young persons really be members of the church and to participate meaningfully in the church on campus and in their home communities."

French, German, and Spanish Teaching Majors Approved

Beginning this fall, Goshen's students preparing for teaching careers in high schools had three more majors to choose from.

Late last spring the Teacher Training and Licensing Commission of the Indiana Division of Teacher Education and Certification approved Goshen's 40-hour course requirements for teaching majors in French, German, and Spanish.

Before, Goshen College offered only teaching minors in these foreign languages; this meant that prospective teachers, to meet requirements, had also to meet the requirements for a teaching major in another subject area.

With this development, Goshen now offers prospective secondary teachers majors in 14 subjects.

Seniors Enjoy College Preview

Seventy-two high school seniors took part in Goshen College's sixth annual College Preview last June 19-26. The Previewers came from Indiana, Ohio, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Iowa, and Virginia, and studied in one of four workshops—Religion and Man, Literature and Drama, Science and Math, and Contemporary Problems.

Goshen's College Preview is unique for high school juniors—during the summer before their senior year—to get acquainted with other college-bound students, professors, the college campus, and some of the extracurricular parts of college life, like worship and chapel services, choral music, and social life.

Since the first Preview, about 250 students have taken part. Of those, 200, or 80 per cent, of the Previewers later chose Goshen as their college.

Leland K. Weldy, of Goshen's department of admissions, has announced Goshen's seventh annual College Preview for June 18-25, 1966.

Ulrich Named National Chairman

Frank Ulrich '55, general sales manager of Sauder Manufacturing Co., of Archbold, Ohio, is the national chairman of the 1966 Alumni Annual Fund. Frank was appointed to the post by the executive committee of the Alumni Association.

Originally from Roanoke, Ill., Frank was Sauder's first full-time sales representative when he joined the company in 1955. Maker of church furniture, Sauder has increased its capacity several times in the past few years since Frank has been on the staff.

Frank is presently recruiting national vice-chairmen and state chairmen for his alumni organization. He and his staff will serve their Alma Mater as volunteers.

Vice-president of the Alumni Association of Goshen College, Frank is eager to use the opportunity that the 1966 Alumni Annual Fund gives him for bringing his fellow alumni down to date about Goshen College.

According to Frank, interest and enthusiasm for the College — its 75th Anniversary Development Program, the increasing numbers of students seeking admission, the record-breaking enrollment, and the plans for the new residence halls and the new library—can't be communicated fairly to alumni unless they, too, have a chance to take part.

Frank is married to the former Cara Frey '55. Their four children are one girl and three boys: Jan, 9; John Franklin, 7; Michael, 3; and Thomas Frey, who arrived last July 13.

Hebrew Festival of Sukkoth Theme of 1965 Homecoming

Sukkoth—the Hebrew Feast of Tabernacles (or the Feast of Booths, or of Ingathering)—is the theme of Goshen's Homecoming, Nov. 25-28.

Stemming from a harvest celebration (Ex. 34:22, Lev. 23:34-36, Deut. 16:13-17), Sukkoth became a high peak in the year's joyous occasions for the early Hebrews and continues down to the present day. The autumn festival, at the grape vintage and final harvest of olives and fruits, was celebrated by families tenting in booths.

Sukkoth recalls the 40 years' wilderness pilgrimage of the Hebrews' nomadic forebears. The people erected booths or huts on roofs or roads and lived in them during Sukkoth. The celebration was marked by processions, the waving of palm branches, and the singing of happy songs.

Holy days have always been an important part of the joyous religious life in the Hebrew-Christian tradition. They symbolize landmarks in the faith. For the Hebrew people, feasts and festivals were anniversaries of their salvation and were celebrations of events in their national history.

High lights during Goshen's Homecoming—Sukkoth will be the traditional Thanksgiving service at 10:30 a.m., Nov. 25. Pres. Mininger will deliver the sermon. The Thanksgiving dinner will be served from 12 to 1 in the Alumni Memorial Dining Room.

The Second Annual Faculty Talent Show will be at 2 p.m. in the Union Auditorium.

Alumni in the social work professions are invited to the home of Prof. and Mrs. Lester Glick from 2 to 5 p.m. Mennonite Graduate Students will have an informal tea and discussion from 4 to 5:30 in the Seminary Lounge.

Nursing alumni are invited to the home of Prof. and Mrs. Abner Hershberger—classes of '53 to '60 from 4 to 5 p.m. and classes of '61 to '65 from 5 to 6 p.m. Alumni meetings of other special interests were not set as this went to press.

"Five Years in Retrospect," an art exhibition by Abner Hershberger, of Goshen's department of art, will be on display in the Union Lounge during Homecoming. In the exhibit are 60 pieces, including watercolor and oil paintings, intaglios, woodcuts, dry points, and stoneware.

The department of music will present the program in the Union Auditorium at 8 p.m. Thursday.

Friday morning Prof. John Oyer will speak in chapel. Performing at the Friday evening Lecture-Music event will be Martha Schlamme, who will announce her program, "Songs of Many Lands," from the stage. Miss Schlamme was raised in the Orthodox Jewish tradition; she has an international repertoire of folk songs.

Saturday afternoon there will be informal recreation in the Union Gymnasium. Saturday evening at 8 will be the first basketball contest of the season—Goshen vs. St. Francis.

Alumni are invited to take part in all Sunday worship services of the College Mennonite Church on November 28—morning worship at 8:30 and 11:00; Sunday School at 9:45; and evening worship at 7:00.

Ten Years Have Changed Many an Alumnus of '56

That class of '56 has scattered like buckshot. In all vocations and to all corners of the globe they have gone in a mere ten years.

They're living on the West Coast
In New Hampshire and South Dakota
In Columbus and Tokyo
And points between, to boot.
Cards came by train, by plane, by foot,
By bicycle, car, and motorboat.

We sigh and wonder at what the clan of '56 has already done. And we hasten to point out that in June there will be the largest assemblage of the clan since '56—mark it on your calendar now—Saturday, June 4, 1966.

Lillian Amstutz, of Griffith, Ind., received her M.A. from Colorado State College last August; she now teaches third grade in Griffith Town Schools, but from '60 to '65 she taught Navajo children at Ganado, Ariz. . . . Mrs. Richard A. Class of '46 Report After 20 Years

The year—1946—329 students at Goshen (today, 1224). Dean Carl Kreider wrote in the 1946 Maple Leaf, "Never before has man spanned the continent in less than six hours of flying time (today man orbits the earth in less than two hours). Class motto: "He conquers who endures." The Locust Grove and East Goshen Sunday schools were both three years old. Locust Grove had 31 members; today it has 74. East Goshen was the worship center for 75 persons each Sunday; today it serves 239. The A Cappella Choir toured parts of Ohio over the Easter recess; this spring it will tour Illinois, Iowa, and Minnesota.

A $100,000 Goal?

Our definite goal for 1966 hasn't been set yet, but we think $100,000 is realistic to present to the executive committee for its approval at the next meeting.

If they say yes, we're going to pass that $100,000 goal by next June 30. We feel strongly that we will.

Two years ago we alumni raised $56,000. Last year we raised $80,000 for our Alma Mater.

Along with increased giving, more alumni have taken part. Two years ago 18 per cent of Goshen's alumni gave. Last year 24 per cent gave. This year that figure will take another leap.

Becoming more evident every day in the life of the nation and the church is the need for higher education. We don't need to argue that Goshen College provides quality education for young persons and that the faculty and staff do anything but an outstanding job to prepare those young persons for a life of service to the church and the world.

Business and industry are looking favorably toward giving direct support to Goshen College. Last year Elkhart County business and professional persons and special givers exceeded their $70,000 goal by more than $2,000.

In the end, we alumni point the way. Our gifts and our rate of participation tell business and industry — and all the world — how we hold GC in esteem. As we think well of our Alma Mater, so also will business and industry, special givers, and foundations.

But the key that unlocks the door in 1966 may be $100,000 — and an increase in participation over last year's.

Editorial

Overwhelming

The plan was to feature the classes of '46, '56, and '61. All persons who graduated in those years or attended GC two years with those classes were invited to take part in the Alumni Poll.

When the Poll cards came back, it was clear that there just wasn't enough space to include all three classes and do justice to what each alumnus had written.

A decision had to be made. Shall we write less about each alumnus and include all three classes or shall we hold the Poll cards for one class until the February, 1966, issue. We decided in favor of the latter.

In this issue are two features instead of three. Thirty-nine of the 66 alumni of the Class of '46 took part; their rate of participation in the Poll was 59 per cent.

Of the 156 alumni of the Class of '56, 115 took part. That is a rate of participation of 74 per cent, 15 points better than the Class of '46.

But the Class of '61 did even better than that — 161 of its 213 alumni returned their Poll cards — for a rate of participation of 76 per cent. That's two points better than '56 did.

We don't plan to have another alumni poll until late next spring. We simply can't afford it. Goshen's alumni lead too interesting lives to squeeze their achievements and activities in anything less than eight pages.

So for the Class of '61 — we ask you for an extra measure of patience until next February — when we will devote the major part of that issue to your alumni.

LINES FROM LIECHTY

Academic freedom, the prize of American colleges today, suggests the pursuit for excellence by both students and faculty. Alumni are best able to understand and to interpret the fact that academic freedom may become an escape from excellence.
